White House Asked to Act At Once in Coal Strike

Trade Group Wires Truman Fuel Crisis Is Already Here; No Progress Made

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Pressure mounted yesterday for an early end of the soft coal strike, but there were no indications that either the coal or steel walkout was any closer to a settlement than when they started weeks ago.

The American Retail Coal Association, a trade organization covering 27 States, urged President Truman to act "immediately" in bringing a halt to the bituminous coal strike, which has idled some 400,000 United Mine Workers since September 19. The strikers seek contract improvements.

Sees Emergency Now

J. Atlee Schafer, of Cleveland, president of the association, wired the White House that "a national emergency in the bituminous coal consuming area exists right now." He said:

"In hundreds of communities there is no supply of domestic fuel available for thousands of customers dependent upon our industry for fuel. Colder weather is on its way. Only the unseasonable weather . . . far warmer than normal, has prevented an earlier crisis."

The association head said that his group was urging Government intervention in the coal walkout because negotiations between John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers and the largest segment of the mine owners had completely broken down.

(In Washington, P. A. Deck, chairman of the coal division, Merchants and Manufacturers Association, said yesterday that there was enough coal on hand to take care of local needs for some time to come.

Meanwhile, in conformance with an Interstate Commerce Commission order—issued in the interest of soft coal conservation—those railroads with less than 25 days' supply of coal withdrew 25 percent of their steam-operated passenger locomotives last night.

An industry survey indicated that some 600 trains were canceled for a two-month period as a result of the ICC directive, chiefly in the East and South.

New York Central, hardest hit of the railroads, cut off 146 trains. Pennsylvania withdrew 103 trains. (Few trains were pulled out of operation here. Pennsy withdrew train No. 502, Harrisburg to Washington; and the sleeping cars on Nos. 575, 596, and 598, on the Washington to Canandaigua, N. Y., Washington to Rochester, N. Y., and reverse runs. Off to the Jewelry Store . . .

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
Vice President Barkley and Mrs. Hadley go shopping

St. Charles, Mo., Oct. 25 (U.P.)—Mrs. Charleton S. Hadley showed up in a jewelry store here today with Vice President Alben W. Barkley.

But Mrs. Hadley, attractive 38-year-old widow and frequent "date" of the Veep, said there was no romantic significance to the jewelry store trip nor to the fact that the couple have been guests at the "Skyline," an estate of friends near here, since Saturday.

She said she and Barkley came to St. Charles to get a jade necklace of hers restrung and to pick up some groceries. They visited three jewelry stores without success but at the last they were recognized. Barkley then signed a number of autographs for the jeweler and a group of teen-agers.

Mrs. Hadley said their stay at the "Skyline" was "just a nice quiet visit in the country with friends."

Barkley, she said, arrived here Saturday by commercial air liner and will leave tomorrow for Washington.

Johnson Sees Truman on Service Row

Secretary Refuses To Comment After White House Parley On Armed Forces

By The Associated Press

Secretary of Defense Johnson talked over the bitter armed forces row with President Truman yesterday, but later kept silent about a possible shakeup in the Navy high command.

"We are just working on unification and it is coming along," Johnson told newsmen as he left the White House.

The big, booming-voiced defense chief refused either to confirm or deny reports that Vice Admiral Forrest Sherman, commander of the U. S. Sixth Task Fleet in the Mediterranean, would succeed Admiral Louis E. Denfeld as Chief of Naval Operations.

Strongest Critic

During the recent stormy hearings before the House Armed Services Committee, Denfeld was one of the Navy's strongest critics of policies adopted by the unified defense setup. He and other admirals charged that the Navy's power was being dangerously weakened.

Commenting on speculation about Admiral Sherman as the new top man in the Navy, Johnson told reporters:

"I have made no announcement of any type or character in that field. I have indulged in no comment. I have said nothing that could be a basis for that story. And I am saying nothing now that could support or deny it."

"Is there any impending change in the high command of the Navy?" a reporter asked.

No Comment

"No comment," Johnson said crisply.

Once again, Johnson announced a hands-off policy on the question of a court martial or other punishment for Navy Capt. John G. Crommelin, 48-year-old exponent of Naval aviation, who touched off the congressional investigation of the inter-service controversy.

"That's a Navy matter," Johnson said.

Newsmen then turned to Secretary of the Navy Matthews, who accompanied Johnson to the White House conference, and asked:

"What have you to say?"

"Nothing—at the moment," Matthews replied.

Admiral Denfeld notified Crommelin Monday that in releasing "confidential" documents to the press on October 3 he had violated "military law."

Denfeld asked Crommelin whether he had any statement to offer, thus giving him a chance to defend himself in advance of the decision on whether he is to be court-martialled.

Johnson said he reported to Mr. Truman on an earlier meeting at the Pentagon with top civilian defense chiefs. He said he told the President of their discussion of all the testimony aired before the House Armed Service Committee "and the lessons to be learned from it."

But he would not comment on any decisions reached as the results of the "lessons."

He said the Pentagon discussions "covered the whole field" of charges and counter charges aired by the admirals and generals dur-

British Jet Liner Flies 450 MPH To Break Record

London, Oct. 25 (NYHT).—Britain's de Havilland Comet, the first all-jet airliner, flew from London to Libya, North Africa, and back today in a flying time of six hours and 36 minutes for the 2,978-mile journey. Average speed was 450 miles an hour.

The four-jet Comet broke all records for commercial aircraft. It made the round-trip in an estimated 94 minutes less than a normal commercial airliner would have taken for the one-way journey to Libya. At the average speed recorded today, the Comet could fly direct from London to New York in seven hours.

The Comet, which is not expected to go into regular commercial service before 1952, has for some time been under close examination here by representatives of American airline firms. They have been reported favorably impressed with the Comet as a commercial proposition for the North Atlantic run.

Army to Free All Draftees By February

Must Go Into Guard Or Reserve; No New Call, Gray Says

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Montgomery, Ala., Oct. 25.—Army Secretary Gordon Gray today announced plans to release all draftees from military service.

He disclosed that the strength of the Army will be cut to 630,000 men by February under the defense spending cutback ordered by Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson and said it will be accomplished by reducing the draft period from 21 to 12 months.

The Army chief also spiked reports that a new draft call may be impending. While urging that Congress retain the Selective Service Act on the books beyond next June, Gray said he "knew of no draft call in the foreseeable future."

He also announced that 400 second lieutenants—ROTC graduates of draft age who also have been required to serve 21 months—may be released after 12 months under the new policy.

Some 24,000 inductees and 6000 special 21-month volunteers will be let go during December and January, Gray said. They'll have to sign up in the National Guard or Reserve, as provided in the Selective Service Act.

Gray made his announcement to the seventy-first annual convention of the National Guard Association meeting here. He said the requirment that the outgoing men enroll in a civilian component should bolster the guard with already trained men.

While the Army Secretary did not spell out the fact that the new policy will give the Nation an entirely volunteer Army by February, Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service director, told The Washington Post that this would be the effect of the order.

3 Parties Ask Attlee Downfall

Economy Program Called Too Timid; Prime Minister to Ask Confidence Vote

London, Oct. 25 (AP).—Three parties—Conservatives, Liberals and Independent Leftists—called Prime Minister Attlee's economy program too timid tonight and demanded the downfall of his Labor government.

Attlee went to Buckingham Palace for a private audience with King George. It was his second audience in eight days. The first was before he announced he had no intention of calling a general election this year.

The House of Commons is to vote on four motions Thursday after a two-day debate on the economy program announced yesterday—a 25-percent cut in dollar spending for imports and an 8-percent cut in the government budget outlay for the year.

That program already has drawn down on Attlee the hardest criticism from the press since he took office in 1945. Critics said Attlee's economy was "too little and too late."

Confidence Vote

The first motion is by Attlee, demanding a vote of confidence.

The second is an amendment by Winston Churchill's Conservatives, declaring the government is "taking no sufficient measures" to prevent inflation and restore the national credit abroad.

The third is by the Liberal Party's 10 members in Commons. It "condemns the inadequacy" of the Attlee program.

The fourth is a motion of censure by the independent labor group—a half dozen left-wingers ousted from the Labor Party—which objects to the mere 4 percent slash in the outlay for defense.

The leftists demanded a 400 million pound ($1,120,000,000) trimming of the arms budget—contrasted with the 30 million pound (84 million dollars) reduction ordered by Attlee.

On September 18 Britain devalued the pound from $4.03 to $2.80 with the object of fattening export trade. Attlee defeated a vote of no-confidence, 350 to 212, in the battle over devaluation September 28.

Devaluation Threat

Devaluation, however, threatened a rising tide of prices and wages which might wipe out the export advantage of devaluation and Attlee proposed to counter the threat by a slash in government spending.

His program included a 280 million pound (784 million dollars) reduction in expenditures for housing and construction, press agents, defense, medical, food subsidies and ordinary administration.

Sir Stafford Cripps, Chancellor of the Exchequer, leads off the debate Wednesday with a fuller explanation of government plans. This may particularly concern which of Britain's dollar imports will be trimmed hardest.

Plane Jumper Saves Another

Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., Oct. 25 (AP).—A parachute jumper snatched a companion literally from thin air to safety today.

The rescue was made when the two parachutists were about halfway down a 1000-foot jump from a slow-flying C-82 transport plane.

They collided in the air and before they got untangled, the parachute of Pfc. Charles A. Dye, Akron, Ohio, collapsed. He began to hurtle earthward.

As Dye's chute went by him, Sergt. Marvin O. Smith, Huntsville, Ala., reached out and caught the trailing shroud lines. His own 'chute carried them both safely the remaining 500 feet of the jump.

New Development In Long Feud Puts Soviet Perilously Near Full Break

London (Wednesday), Oct. 26 (AP).—The Soviet Union said today it has demanded the recall of the Yugoslav Ambassador to Moscow because he is guilty of "spying and subversive activities" against Russia.

The action followed Russia's renunciation last month of her treaty of friendship with Yugoslavia. It brought Moscow perilously close to a full diplomatic break with Marshal Tito's government.

The Russian Ambassador to Belgrade has been absent from his post for many weeks.

Karl Mrazovic, the Yugoslav Ambassador to Russia, went to Moscow last December 16, when relations between Yugoslavia and Russia were already near the boiling point.

Text of Official Note

The economic squeeze put on Yugoslavia by Russia and her eastern satellites was in full effect then. Moscow dispatches at the time said only a minor Russian protocol officer was sent to greet Mrazovic on his arrival.

The Moscow Radio, which announced the demand for the recall of Mrazovic, said it was contained in a note handed to the Yugoslav Embassy in Moscow yesterday.

The text of the note:

"The Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics has been authorized by the Soviet government to inform the Yugoslav government of the following:

"During the Budapest trial of the state criminal and spy (Laszlo) Rajk and his accomplices it was established that the present Yugoslav Ambassador in the U.S.S.R., Mrazovic, had for a long time engaged in spying and subversive activities against the Soviet Union, and while being Yugoslav Ambassador in the U.S.S.R., had come out in the Yugoslav press with slanderous fabrications against the Soviet Union.

Feud Began in June, 1948

"In view of this the Soviet Government considers it impossible for Mrazovic to continue to be Yugoslavia's diplomatic representative in the U.S.S.R."

The Soviet demand that Marshal Tito recall his ambassador was the latest development in the feud between Yugoslavia and the Cominform—the Soviet-led association of eastern Communist nations which has accused Tito of being anti-Russian and deviating from the true Marxist line.

It started in June of 1948 with the original Cominform denunciation and has waxed hotter ever since.

Diplomatic sources in London speculated on Monday that Russia was planning new moves in a cold war of nerves against Yugo-

Bidault Wins Participation Of Socialists

Agree 'in Principle' After Dropping Their Labor Post Demands

Paris (Wednesday), Oct. 26 (U.P.).—French Socialist leaders agreed "in principle" early today to participate in a new coalition government headed by Premier-designate Georges Bidault.

This development came after the party, in an abrupt about-face, had dropped its demand that Daniel Mayer continue as Minister of Labor. He held the post under Henri Queuille, who resigned as Premier three weeks ago.

Socialist parliamentary deputies, after conferring with Bidault, voted to join his coalition—under certain conditions. They still had a few minor reservations concerning his economic program.

A Socialist delegation planned another meeting with Bidault later in the morning to attempt to settle their remaining problems.

Meanwhile, the recalcitrant Radical Socialists met to discuss the situation.

The original Socialist demand to retain Daniel Mayer in any new cabinet had wrecked the attempts of both Socialist Jules Moch and Radical Socialist Rene Mayer to form a government. When the Socialists dropped their demand it removed a major obstacle in the way of formation of a new government by Bidault.

The Socialist move was regarded as bold tactics to put the blame on the Radical Socialists should Bidault fail.

Both parties have been cool to the former professor and resistance hero, but neither apparently wanted to be responsible for his failure.

14 Are Injured In Dallas Housing Project Explosion

Dallas, Tex., Oct. 25 (AP).—An explosion tonight wrecked an apartment house in a Dallas housing development, injuring at least 14 persons.

It was not known whether any persons were killed.

Only four of the 14 injured were considered in serious condition.

The blast rocked buildings in a five-block area. Some persons were thrown out of bed in nearby units of the Cedar Springs housing project.

The explosion occurred in a one-story six-apartment building.

Injured were taken to Parkland Hospital.

Bob Smith, 20, a Navy man home on furlough and occupying a front apartment, said: "I don't know what happened.

"It suddenly went blooie. I was knocked out for about 15 minutes."

Smith suffered facial cuts.

Chile's President To Visit Truman

Santiago, Chile, Oct. 25 (AP).—President Gabriel Gonzales Videla of Chile today accepted an invitation to visit President Truman in Washington next year.

The invitation for the visit was extended personally by Assistant Secretary of State Edward Miller, who is on a South American trip.

The Chilean president's visit would be made toward the end of next March or April. President Gonzales, in turn, invited President Truman to visit Chile.

Miller said he had been authorized by Mr. Truman to say the President desired to visit Chile during the Gonzales administration, possibly in 1950.

Coffee Price Rise Follows N. Y. Advance

$1 a Pound Predicted As Trade Aide Scoffs At 'Luxury' Levels

While coffee futures prices soared in New York and retailers marked many brands of coffee up 2 cents a pound here, an official of the National Coffee Association said yesterday there is no danger of a coffee shortage or "luxury level" prices.

However, as the futures prices on the New York exchange rose the permissible limit of 1½ cents a pound yesterday for the fourth trading day in a row, some local wholesalers said $1 a pound coffee at retail is a distinct possibility.

W. F. Williamson, National Coffee Association manager, said coffee "may be a little more expensive than in the past," and higher prices may be fairly permanent, but "coffee will still take a very small part of the consumer's food budget."

He said his office had received reports of consumer hoarding, "which the association thinks is entirely senseless."

The major retail food chains upped their coffee prices 2 cents a pound on Monday here and a local roaster said "these 2-cent jumps don't begin to reflect what is probable in the future—and I mean $1 a pound."

Popular brands of coffee have been selling in most large chain and independents from about 40 to 62 cents a pound, but this week the 2-cent jump went into effect almost all along the line

Behind the soaring prices on the futures exchange is the story of an all-time high coffee consumption throughout the world, and on the other side forecasts from Brazil of a drought-shortened crop during the current growing year.

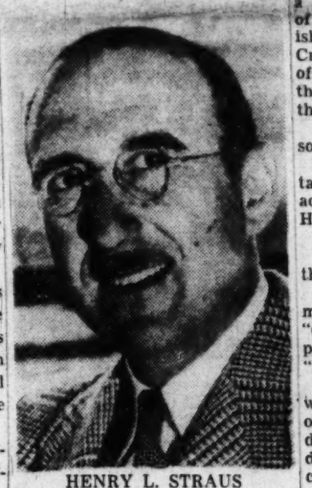
Millionaire, 3 Others Die In Plane Crash



HENRY L. STRAUS
Dies in mid-air explosion

Port Deposit, Md., Oct. 25 (Spl.).—Henry L. Straus, millionaire Baltimore and Reisterstown, Md., race track executive and horse breeder, was one of four men killed here tonight when a private plane exploded in midair, burned and crashed in a wooded area. He owned the well-known horse Pilaster.

The other victims were identified as Arthur J. Johnson, of Ruxton, Md., general manager of the American Totalisator Co., of which Straus was president; Wally Maier, the pilot, and Delton R. Osborne, co-pilot, both of Lake Worth, Fla.

Witnesses told Maryland State police the twin-engined Beechcraft, owned by the Totalisator Co., exploded in flames before it crashed. The unburned wings were sheared from the blazing fuselage by trees.

The crash, 2½ miles north of here, occurred a mile from where a commercial airliner crashed on Memorial Day, 1947, killing 53 persons.

Straus was inventor of the totalisator used at nearly all race-

Teaching of White Supremacy Worth $50 Million to School

Natchez, Miss., Oct. 25 (U.P.).—A rich planter and oilman gave a military school a grant worth 50 million dollars today on its promise to teach white supremacy and States' Rights.

Jefferson Military College, where Jefferson Davis studied, accepted the conditions laid down by Judge George Armstrong, Mississippi landowner.

Armstrong, a former judge, lives the life of a Southern plantation baron at his Woodstock mansion, 12 miles south of Natchez.

An ardent States' Righter who supported that ticket in the 1948 presidential election, he stipulated that the school:

"Teach and disseminate through every medium possible the true principles of Jeffersonian democracy and the Constitution, Christianity and the superiority of the Anglo-Saxon and Latin-American races."

He emphasized that by constitutional government he meant "the Rights of the States."

Another condition of Armstrong's endowment made its acceptance certain. It was the reduction of the military school's board of trustees from 12 to five members, three to be named by him and the other two by the retiring trustees.

The donor named his son, A. J. Armstrong, as one trustee and the younger Armstrong announced acceptance of the endowment.

The gift includes five-sixths of Judge Armstrong's mineral rights on 42,000 acres in Adams, Jefferson and Wilkinson Counties. Some 26,000 other acres were conveyed outright to the school. Oil experts estimated the properties and rights eventually will yield more than 50 million dollars.

The school also agreed to change its charter to exclude as instructors or employes Communists or persons with Communist connections and "any person of African or Asiatic origin."

Jefferson College is situated at Washington, five miles east of here, a town of 500 which isn't on most maps but at one time was the capital of Mississippi territory.

Formerly a college chartered in 1802, the school now is strictly a preparatory academy. Campus landmarks are two giant oaks under which Aaron Burr was tried for his ill-starred attempt to set up a new nation in the South.

Prominent alumni include John James Audubon, the naturalist.

The college's new board of trustees is made up of the younger Armstrong, retired Army Gen. George Van Horn Mosely, United States Attorney Joseph E. Brown (all named by Armstrong), G. H. Brandon and Stanley H. Murphy, both of Natchez (named by the outgoing board).

With 'Qualified' Loyalty Oath

Bishops Advise Czech Priests They May Serve Under State

Prague, Oct. 25 (U.P.).—The Roman Catholic Council of Bishops told priests today they can, if they wish, take a qualified oath of loyalty to the Communist Czech government and accept the state's "tempting" high salaries.

The bishops made it clear the retreat from their previous stand was decided upon because "scores of your brethren are languishing in prison."

The Bishops Council, this country's highest church authority, advised Czech and Slovak priests they can:

1. Swear allegiance to the Communist regime if they add to the standard form: ". . . provided that this is not in conflict with the natural rights of man."

2. Accept the new government-paid salaries if they promise their church superiors: ". . . I am not taking upon myself any obligation which would be in conflict with my priestly conscience and with the Church."

In their official statement made public today, the 12 bishops also announced their willingness to resume negotiations toward a church-state agreement—"if we are invited."

The bishops gathered in secret conclave "somewhere" in Czechoslovakia to revise their approach to the Communist government. Archbishop Josef Beran, Catholic primate, was not present.

The bishops and their staffs rejected government salaries for themselves, but told the priests they can accept them without loss of honor or injury to conscience.

Pursued Driver Beats Cop to Patrol Station

St. Joseph, Mo., Oct. 25 (AP).—Herbert Butterbough of Stansberry drove his car down highway 169 at top speed.

He rolled up to the door of a State Highway Patrol troop headquarters and ran inside to report that he was being chased by another driver.

He was. By a State Highway patrolman.

Wife Brings Home Loose Car Gadget, Just to Be Safe

Ottawa, Canada, Oct. 25. (AP).—Mrs. Fred Browne said she stopped and got out when she heard a clanging noise under her brand new car.

The car seemed to be running all right without the big steel disk lying on the road but she decided to take it home for her husband to look at.

"I just tugged and pulled," she said, explaining how she loaded it into the car trunk. "I guess I was so scared I'd wrecked the car that I could have lifted almost anything."

Hubby took one look at the big steel disk and suggested she take the manhole cover back to the city works department.

Tiny Specks of Comet Dust

Arlington Garden May Provide New Data on Origin of Universe

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

New light on the origin of the universe may come from six oddly shaped visitors captured here, it was reported at the National Academy of Sciences annual meeting.

The six were trapped in October, 1946, by Dr. H. E. Landsberg, geophysicist, who set snares for them on a Virginia mountaintop and in his own Arlington garden.

He lived at 5127 N. 27th rd. at the time.

He caught the torpedo-shaped strangers to this world on glycerin-coated plates of glass, a happy scientific feat since they measure about one six-thousandth of an inch in diameter. No others have ever been caught, before or since.

Dr. Fred L. Whipple, astronomy department chairman at Harvard University, to whom they were entrusted, reported on his investigations of them at the NAS session in Rochester, N. Y. He identified them as bits of comet dust small enough to pass unchanged through the earth's atmosphere.

Now if science can analyze their composition, explained Dr. Whipple, more new facts may be added to the age-old question of the universe's origin. Present theories have been gleaned largely from studies on heavier meteorites which do undergo changes in their hot flights through atmosphere.

Dr. Whipple termed the particles micrometeorites, the only ones now available for laboratory study.

Report Shows U. S. Business on Rise

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The Commerce Department found the Nation moving on an economic upgrade during September, it reported yesterday.

The forward movement of the various indexes was modest, but solid, the Department inferred. In its Survey of Current Business, it pointed out that the shift produced "an over-all stability in economic activity." This was in contrast to the moderate downward trend in the first half of the year.

The principal change, it noted, was that "business purchasing was more in line with current levels of consumption" than in the spring or early summer.

Building to Normal Levels

This appeared to be a roundabout way of saying that business was once again building up its inventories to normal levels. During the downturn in the first part of the year, many concerns let their inventories decline, thus reducing the volume of new orders to manufacturers and other suppliers.

The Commerce Department's report dealt with conditions before the onset of the steel strike and took into account only two weeks of the coal strike.

Other encouraging elements of the September picture which it reported:

Construction activity, particularly residential, was strong. There were 100,000 non-farm residential starts in September, almost equal to the record peak of May 1948.

Retail Sales Stay High

Retail sales continued high, showing the steadiness of consumer buying. All sales rose during August and September, with the volume less than 2 percent below the peak of December 1948.

The level of personal incomes was sustained, and remained within 2 percent of the figure for September a year ago.

Second Highest on Record

Weekly pay-checks, the BLS found, averaged $55.64 in mid-September, the second highest figure on record. This was largely the result of a longer work-week in most industries. Overtime work was scheduled in many fields and all industries except stone, clay or glass products maintained or increased the hours in the work-week from August.

Meantime, the State insurance payments to unemployed dropped during September, the Labor Department reported. They totaled 154 million dollars, or $16,629,000 less than in August. The average number of weekly claimants dropped by about 12 percent.

Part of the decline was due to improved economic conditions, although part represented the exhaustion of current benefit rights in some States, it was reported.

Probe Plans Dropped

The unemployment picture appeared to have become so improved, however, that the Joint Congressional Economic Committee temporarily dropped plans for a major investigation of the situation.

Committee Chairman O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) announced that a subcommittee set up to study unemployment will not conduct public hearings at this time. It had planned to do an on-the-spot survey in various localities throughout the country.

When the subcommittee was set up last summer, unemployment was reported at almost 4,100,000. In August and September it dropped by about 744,000.

Meantime, both the Commerce Department and the Federal Reserve Board took a cautiously hopeful view of the results of devaluation of the British pound and of the currencies of 27 other nations which followed suit.

The Federal Reserve Board felt that devaluation "should facilitate the development of a more balanced trade between the dollar area and the rest of the world." The Commerce Department said that "The competitive position of foreign countries vis-a-vis the United States has to some extent been restored."

Too Early, Both Say

Both organizations cautioned, however, that it was much too early to see the major effects of devaluation. And both warned that it was up to the Europeans, by avoiding inflation, keeping down prices and increasing production for export, to make the devaluations an effective step in balancing their dollar trade.

The Federal Reserve Board added that it was also up to the U. S. to help, by pursuing policies that w ill not hinder European trade adjustments. The reference was presumably to U. S. tariff policies. The Board's monthly bulletin concluded:

"As the world's greatest creditor nation, this country has the unavoidable responsibility to encourage trade in goods and services as the fundamental basis of international financial and economic stability."

California Potatoes Lose Price Props

Secretary of Agriculture Brannan yesterday notified California growers of early crop potatoes they will not be eligible for price support aid on their 1950 and subsequent crops.

They will be denied such aid, he said, because they rejected a proposed Federal marketing agreement and order program designed to help stabilize prices and supplies by keeping low quality potatoes off the market.

In a letter to Congress on September 2, Brannan indicated he would take this action. But he delayed doing so in an apparent move to give the California growers a chance to reconsider rejection of a marketing program.

But the growers took no action. Instead, spokesmen have indicated they might to to the courts and demand price support assistance.

Under Brannon's action, the California growers would become eligible for price supports once they adopted a marketing program.

Potato price supports cost the Government about 225 million dollars on the 1948 crop and may cost about 60 million dollars on the 1949 crop.

California early potatoes—those marketed from April 1 to July 15—are produced in 18 of the State's 58 counties. Kern County alone accounts for nearly 80 percent of the total California production.

Secretary Brannan is expected to propose late this week that marketing quotas be continued on burley tobacco in 1950.

Department tobacco experts have recommended such action in view of the fact that reserves are the largest of record.

Quotas would have to be approved by a t least two thirds of the growers voting in a referendum before they could be kept in effect.

Agriculture Department officials yesterday said it is "quite probable" that rigid marketing quotas will be proposed for the 1950 rice crop.

Foreign Markets for U. S. Oil Endangered, Meeting Hears

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

The bitter struggle of the American oil industry to keep its foreign markets was reflected yesterday at a meeting of leading producers and refiners with Julius A. Krug, Secretary of the Interior.

The meeting, a regular session of the National Petroleum Council, was not called to consider the problem of foreign competition. But the oil men heard a warning about it from Walter J. Levy, former head of the petroleum division of the Economic Cooperation Administration.

Expansion of oil production of foreign companies, he said, represents a potential threat to the American oil industry, since the foreign producers, unlike the American, sell their oil for non-dollar currencies.

With most of the world short of dollars, he argued, such foreign sales would be "at the expense of outlets for American-owned oil." He thought foreign inroads upon the earnings of American oil companies would also represent an indirect threat to the Point Four program, which aims at encouraging private investments in under-developed areas abroad.

"The United States oil industry," he declared, "represents by far the largest source for foreign capital investments. If this source of investment is cut off or the productivity of past investments curtailed, the whole Point Four private industry program will be put in jeopardy."

The international problem has long been one of the worst headaches of the 18-nation Marshall Plan organization in Paris, and also a source of endless disagreement between the British and American governments.

The British oil industry, for example, contemplates an expansion of 50 percent by 1952, when the Marshall Plan is scheduled to end. A recent ECA report estimated that all foreign crude oil production would increase from three million barrels daily in 1948 to 4,600,000 barrels daily in 1952.

As to refining, a report by the Marshall Plan organization in Paris last week approved with some reservations, plans for expansion based on a 9 percent greater consumption of oil in Europe in 1952 than now.

Some of the European plans, to be financed with Marshall Plan funds, will provide more oil than the European countries themselves can use. France, for example, is planning for an export surplus of 3,325,000 metric tons a year by 1952, some of it destined for sale in other European countries which themselves are planning to build new refineries.

The American oil companies see these European plans as a dangerous threat, and they have exerted unending pressure on ECA to keep the European expansion within more realistic bounds.

The British financial crisis has added a new complication and a new danger from the companies' standpoint. Although Britain is a leading oil producer through her properties in Iran, Iraq and elsewhere, she now spends an estimated 700 million dollars a year—in dollars—for oil and oil products from American-owned sources.

This is the biggest single drain on the British gold and dollar reserves. When Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin sat down with American officials for the "dollar talks" last month, he wanted to start work on the problem quickly, and he astonished American officials by saying British experts were already on their way to Washington to discuss it.

The Americans were not ready with an agreed Government policy on the subject. Since then the agencies concerned—chiefly State, Interior and ECA—have worked out a policy for negotiation with the British. Broadly speaking, the American position is this:

We think we can save you some of those 700 million dollars you are now spending. We think we can persuade our oil companies to accept payment abroad in sterling, instead of forcing your sterling-area countries to dip into your dollar reserves for American-owned oil products.

But we cannot agree to let you earn more dollars by expanding your production at the expense of our own companies, or by selling your oil in markets that are closed to ours.

American and British experts are now at work trying to establish facts from which real negotiations can begin. Their first job is to discover how much dollar expenditure is hidden in one form or another, in the production, refining and shipping of oil from British-owned sources. This in itself will keep them busy for months, because dollar and sterling costs are thoroughly jumbled and have never been sorted out.

One informed guess was that it might take as long as eighteen months before the two governments agree on a policy which will save dollars for the British and still protect the legitimate interests of the American companies.

Envoy Jessup ToAvoid China In Asia Study

Ambassador Philip C. Jessup plans to avoid setting foot on Chinese soil, either Nationalist or Communist, on his projected survey mission to the Far East.

The nearest he will come, according to present plans, will be Hongkong, almost within sight of Communist-held Canton.

Secretary of State Acheson has virtually decided to send Jessup, who is chairman of his advisory committee on Far Eastern policy, on a visit that will help determine American policy toward Communist China and toward the struggling new nations of southeast Asia.

Acheson has already promised that he would not recognize the new Chinese regime without "consultation" with Congress, through the foreign policy committees of the two houses.

He will be better able to consult Congress when he has the facts which Jessup will bring back from the Far East. The Secretary has already said recognition would depend on whether the Communist regime:

(1) Effectively controls China's territory, (2) states and demonstrates that it will live up to China's international obligations, and (3) has the clear-cut support of the Chinese people.

Meantime Jessup and his committee are still trying to decide whether, to what extent, and under what conditions the United States should encourage its citizens to trade with Communist China.

Big Business Gets 73% of Service Orders

By The Associated Press

An Army procurement officer testified yesterday that about 27 percent of the armed services' purchases are from small business and 73 percent from other firms.

Chairman Celler (D., N. Y.) of a House Judiciary Subcommittee investigating monopolistic practices commented: "It would be a far healthier state of affairs to give 73 percent to small business."

Brig. Gen. E. M. Brannon, who told of the current division of purchases between small and comparatively large firms, pointed out that the percentages he listed applied only to prime contractors and did not reflect additional sums that went to small business through subcontracts.

Law Aids Small Firms

In a round-table discussion, purchasing officers of the Army, Air Force and Navy assured the subcommittee that small firms will get a fair share of the Government business, as required by a new procurement law that took effect last July 1. That law provides that bidders for Government contracts must state specifically whether they employ 500 persons or less than that number.

The subcommittee reopened its monopoly hearings yesterday after a recess from last July. Celler said the central purpose of the inquiry is to decide whether additional antimonopoly controls should be placed on big business.

Commenting on yesterday's testimony, Celler said:

"Our economy has so developed that our Government, the greatest purchaser not only in the United States but in the world, is of itself helping big business.

"It is a conclusion we cannot escape. What can we do about it?"

The military purchasing officers said the armed services are trying to stick to standard specifications so as to allow wider bidding. They said that if complaints are received that the specifications are too restrictive, they are changed immediately to open up the field.

To Run Until December

The hearings are expected to run until the middle of December. The prospective witness list includes many big industrialists.

Celler said:

"The question must be answered—should the law attack bigness in business?"

"The present antitrust laws are directed against big business when it abuses its power so as to fix prices, to prevent competition, or to keep new competitors from entering the field.

"This subcommittee is examining the present laws to see whether they can be amended so as to perform this original purpose more successfully."

Retail Coffee Prices Boosted After N. Y. Futures Advance

green beans available in warehouses or on the docks in New York—was quoted yesterday at 41 to 44 cents a pound for a basic grade which sold at just above 26 cents only last April.

In the United States, green beans of the grade quoted yesterday at 41 cents were going for 7 or 8 cents a pound.

Even these high prices were "nominal," meaning that very little coffee was being offered for sale and there was no guarantee that large-sized shipments could be obtained for that cost.

Major coffee roasters, who buy the green coffee and process it for distribution to retail stores and restaurants, have boosted wholesale prices 2 to 3 cents a pound since last Wednesday.

Importers fear that the world shortage, estimated at two million bags this year, will be increased to four million bags when next year's crop is counted.

Dulles Says Truman Route Follows Reds

New York, Oct. 25 (U.P.).—Senator John Foster Dulles (R., N. Y.) charged tonight that the Truman Administration is following the Communist trail.

"The present Democratic Administration represents the philosophy that material welfare is so important that it can be properly bought at the price of freedom," Dulles declared. "We cannot provide effective world leadership in opposition to the world-wide political warfare of Soviet communism so long as we are merely following in their trail."

In a speech prepared for delivery before the New York Herald Tribune Forum, Dulles charged that the Truman Administration's new proposals involve a "clear danger to human liberty."

Material Welfare Source

"For the first time since our Nation was founded the great political victories are being won by those who demand that the individual subordinate himself to the all-powerful central government as the only way to get increased material welfare," Dulles said.

"That philosophy prevails today over the one third of the human race that Communists rule . . . It is to a considerable extent indorsed in this country by the present Democratic Administration in Washington."

Today's main topic at the forum was the Republican Party and the speakers included GOP National Chairman Guy Gabrielson, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr. (R., Mass.), Senator Wayne L. Morse (R., Oreg.), Senator Margaret Chase Smith (R., Maine), Senator James P. Kem (R., Mo.), Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.), Philip H. Willkie, son of the late Wendell L. Willkie; Gov. Val Peterson of Nebraska, Harold Russell, commander of Amvets, and Alexander M. Lankler, director of youth activities for the New York State Republican Committee.

Senator Lodge said the GOP must win the "confidence of labor" if it is to compete with the Democratic Party at the polls.

"The fate of the Whig Party in 1852 shows what can happen when a major element in the country utterly refuses even to consider a political party," Lodge said. "The inability of the Whigs to deal with the slavery issue must not be matched by the inability of the Republicans to deal with labor problems. There is no place in the Republican Party, or in any American political organization, for reactionaries—as distinguished from conservatives—who . . . refuse to accept changes which are here to stay."

3-Point Platform

He called for a three-point platform to put the GOP in a competitive position: really economical and efficient Government; social legislation to "fill in the chinks which the competitive system does not reach" and enactment of a civil rights program, "a field in which the Democrats will always be weak, faltering, apologetic and divided."

Senator Kem said State governments are in a much better financial position to improve existing health, education and housing facilities than the Federal Government because the States "do not face the possibility of bankruptcy."

Senator Kefauver, speaking on "How the Democrats can help the Republican Party," urged abolition of the Electoral College and election of President and Vice President by counting the electroal vote in proportion to the popular vote.

He said the proposed constitutional amendment, which he and Senator Lodge have sponsored in the Senate, would "increase Republican voting power in the South by discouraging the present one-party system in many Southern States."

STUART BENSON
Disappears from liner

New York, Oct. 25 (U.P.).—Stuart Benson, American sculptor, vanished from the ship bringing him from France to New York, it was disclosed today. The disappearance is a mystery.

The 72-year-old former Army major was enfeebled with dysentery, which had plagued him since World War I, and was confined to his cabin when he boarded the Gdynia-America Line motorship Sobieski October 15, line officials said.

When a steward found his cabin empty, a 24-hour search was begun. First, his deck was searched because Benson was believed too feeble to change decks. Then the ship was searched from bridge to hold, and the captain sent the missing message.

Barter Plan With India Up

NYHT News Service

The state visit to Washington of Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru was disclosed yesterday to have started one discussion which could lead to a series of bilateral deals with dollar-short foreign nations for exchange of American surplus commodities for strategic raw materials which the United States wants to stockpile.

The exploratory conversations now in progress stem from the already publicized need of India for one million tons of American wheat—about 80 million dollars worth. India has resources which could be developed to produce enough manganese and mica—two of the strategic materials which the United States would like to have in its stockpile—within the next three or four years.

The discussions thus far have been directed toward finding out whether a formula can be worked out under which the wheat which India wants could be bartered for the manganese and mica which the United States desires. They are, State Department sources emphasized, still definitely in the "exploratory" stage—seeking to discover whether a foundation exists on which some such deal might be based.

Exploration of the possibilities on behalf of India was left by Prime Minister Nehru to Sir Chintaman Deshmukd, his government's roving economic ambassador. He is discussing the possibility of advancing the idea toward a stage of concrete negotiation with various United States officials concerned with the intricate problems involved on both the practical and policy levels.

Another U. S. Embassy Aide Expelled by Czechs as 'Spy'

Prague, Oct. 25 (AP).—For the second time in five days, the Communist Czechoslovak government today ordered the expulsion of an American Embassy official on charges of spying.

The newly named official, declared persona non grata, is John C. Heyn, assistant attache in the embassy's political department. However, he is already out of the country. Embassy sources said he was either in Germany or Vienna and would not return to Prague.

Heyn was accused of industrial espionage and attempting to learn Czechoslovak state secrets about industrial production and commercial relations. He was charged with using Czechoslovak citizens to gather this information.

He was assistant to Isaac Patch, the embassy's political attache, who was expelled Friday on 24 hours notice. Heyn came to Prague April 19. His home is in Springdale, Conn.

Patch and an embassy clerk, Samuel Meryn, were accused by the government of directing a widespread espionage ring. Patch denied the accusations.

Meryn was imprisoned Friday and still is held incommunicado. He faces trial in a Czech court on spy charges.

Russia Asks Envoy Recall

slavia. But these sources discounted rumors that Russia was planning direct military action against Yugoslavia.

The Soviet Union suffered a defeat on the diplomatic front last week when Yugoslavia was elected to the United Nations Security Council over Czechoslovakia, the latter a faithful member of the Cominform.

In dragging up testimony from the Rajk treason trial in Hungary the Russians were falling back on a device used when the Cominform nations scrapped their treaties of friendship with Yugoslavia last month.

The Cominform nations cited testimony in the trial to sustain their allegations that Yugoslavia was plotting against Russia and the other "people's democracies."

When Czechoslovakia served notice on Yugoslavia that it was ending the friendship pact the Czechs also demanded the recall of the Yugoslav Ambassador to Prague. The other Cominform countries did not go that far.

None went to far as to sever diplomatic relations with Yugoslavia, and it appeared that even Russia was not doing this in her latest move.

The Soviet Ambasador to Yugoslavia, Anatole I. Lavrentiev, was promoted last month to the job of Deputy Minister of Foreign Affairs.

Tass, the official Soviet news agency, made no announcement at the time of a successor to Lavrentiev in Belgrade. Thus while the post in Belgrade remains vacant, diplomatic relations can continue through minor officials.

The Russians have used strong language in denouncing Tito's regime. A few days before the Lavrentiev promotion was announced Russia called the Tito regime an "enemy" of the Soviet Union.

Equally strong language has come from Yugoslavia in denouncing what it terms Russian attempts to dictate the internal policies of the Yugoslav government.

German Trusts Hit

Frankfurt, Germany, Oct. 25 (AP). United States High Commissioner John J. McCloy expressed today his firm determination to split up Germany's industrial cartels.

"I am a very firm believer in the antitrust system," he said.

Vatican Warns Czechs Great Danger Is Near

Rome, Oct. 25 (U.P.).—The Vatican City Radio urged Czechoslovak Roman Catholics to "be strong because great danger will come over you in the next few days."

In a Czech-language broadcast, the Vatican declared it is possible for Czech Catholics "to preserve their faith for a long time, even without priests."

The broadcast told Czech Catholics to be cautious, to teach religion in the family and to pray for the priests.

The Vatican's message beamed to Czechoslovakia preceded by six days the date on which that country's new Communist-drafted church control law transforming priests into virtual civil servants goes into effect.

The broadcast contained these five instructions for the faithful:

1. "You must be strong because great danger will come over you in the next few days. Therefore, it is necessary for you to receive Holy Communion.

2. "You must be cautious. Nobody can be arrested if only he is cautious.

3. "It may be that in the future you will be able to teach religion only in your family. Therefore, pray in the home if it will be impossible to do so in public.

4. "The faith may be preserved in Catholic families for a long time, even without priests.

5. "Pray for your priests in the hard battle against Marxist ideology."

Tito Request To Join Pact Denied Here

Rome, Oct. 25 (U.P.).—The Ari News Agency quoted "one of Marshal Tito's close advisers" today as reporting that Yugoslavia had made a formal request for admission to the Atlantic Pact.

"Very interesting and entirely untrue" was the comment of one highly placed State Department official last night. Reports reaching the Department gave not the least sign that the Tito government was changing its attitude of bitter opposition to the pact.

At the U. N. Assembly last spring, when the pact was signed, Yugoslav delegates vied with the Russians in denouncing it as wicked and imperialistic. This was at a time when the feud between Tito and the Kremlin was almost as intense as now.

Officials here pointed out last night that Tito was still a Communist, that he had to be careful in his overtures toward the West, and that nothing would so surely damage him in the eyes of his Communist supporters as any move to join the pact.

Czech Priests May Serve

They said the priests could best serve the church by continuing to work among the people, avoiding "unpleasant consequences."

The bishops' memorandum was the most conciliatory act on the part of the church since negotiations were abruptly broken off nine months ago. Only last Saturday another document had declared that priests who accepted the extra pay were "not shepherds, but hired laborers."

About 70 per cent of the Catholic clergy previously had protested the church control law, under which the state takes over salaries, training and appointments.

The bishops said those priests who already had accepted the higher salaries "with our knowledge" had done so as the result of "the pressure of external circumstances."

There was one small inkling of government reaction to the church's apparent offer to compromise.

The official Czech News Agency said President Klement Gottwald had given the new state office for church affairs to his son-in-law, Alexej Cepicka, reputed to be the Communist master mind behind the anti-church drive. It appeared Cepicka also would retain his job as Minister of Justice.

The church control bill, passed unanimously by the National Assembly in mid-October, goes into effect November 1.

"You will not be acting against your conscience and priestly honor, which you have unmistakably proved, especially in this mater, if you accept the newly regulated salaries," the priests were told.

"On the one hand it is necessary to protect you from the possible unpleasant consequence and to preserve you for the spiritual care of your believers.

"On the other hand, it is necessary to take into account that your salary is a well-earned remuneration for your devoted work for the welfare of the people.

"You deserve no less respect and gratitude because you did not let yourselves be tempted into expressing your approval of the announced salary regulations which were needed by many of you. If this meant surrender of your freedom and the subjugation of the church.

"If a salary regulation has been agreed on without regard to our common wishes or the recommendations we clearly expressed, and if you, with our knowledge, accepted the raised salaries, this is the result of the pressure of external circumstances and you are changing nothing in your magnanimous attitude, your material unselfishness, your unshakable loyalty to the church, as you proved them long before the said law was enacted."

Even the Reds Are Divided

War-Ravaged Burma Has Its Independence But Is Seething With Internal Conflicts

By Margaret Parton

Rangoon (NYHT).—No country in Asia suffered more from the war than Burma. Foreign armies fought up and down the land. After the war came independence—but not peace.

Today Burma is a welter of warring factions fighting not only against the government, but also among themselves. Communism is but one of several forces struggling for power, and even the Communists are divided.

The Communists are militarily weak but ably led. If non-Communist factions could get together with the government, there would be a good chance that the Reds could be held in check. But the conditions of near-anarchy prevailing in Burma today are ready-made for Communist exploitation, particularly in view of the Communist successes in adjacent China.

The key to the present situation in Burma is held by the rebellious Karens. Whichever side wins over the Karens stands a fair chance of coming out on top. But time is short. If the Burmese Communists are able to obtain material help and moral support from the Chinese Reds, the balance of power may shift.

Food is Not a Problem

Food is no problem here. The Burmese grow more rice than they can eat and before the war they were the largest exporters of rice in the world. In contrast to over-populated India, where the population density is 242 to the sqare mile, Burma has an average of only 65. Teak and oil, lead and tungsten, rubies and jade contributed to her wealth before the war and could do so again if order were restored. Still greater riches lie buried under Burma's soil.

Marxist theory has long been a favorite conversation piece for Burmese politicians. Indeed, the Burmese constitution, drafted in 1947 but not yet ratified, is a clear-cut though moderate Socialist document. However, Marxism in the flesh, as practiced by a powerful neighbor whose intentions toward Burma are problematical, is something else again.

Internal peace in Burma is imperatively necessary and yet so remote that it is not even a glow on the horizon. The government, headed by Thakin Nu, a youthful and high-minded Premier, is stranded in Rangoon and the vicinity. Government troops hold widely scattered areas, some so isolated from the capital that they can be reached only by air. Much of the countryside is overrun by warring groups, as it was a thousand years ago.

British Regime Recalled

For many years the British ran Burma for the benefit of Great Britain, while the Indians and the Chinese took the leftover pickings. The Burmese never enjoyed the fullest opportunity for higher education or for training in national leadership. But it was not possible to bar from Burma the spirit of nationalism which swept Asia in the early part of this century, gathered force in the Twenties and Thirties and exploded in the Forties. By the end of the war, Burmese nationalists were united in a loose alliance of Left Wing groups called the Anti-Fascist People's Freedom League. They won a promise of independence from Britain's Labor government and realized their dream on January 4, 1948.

Today only a segment of the original coalition remains in Rangoon and the government finds itself confronted by open revolt of the following factions:

1. The White Flag Communists. This group, orthodox and pro-Soviet, broke with the government in the spring of 1948.

The top man is Thakin Than Tun, often called "one of the cleverest men in Burma."

2. The Red Flag Communists. This faction, considerably less important than the White Flag group, sometimes cooperate with the White Flags. Its main quarrel with the White Flags seems to be due to the personal rivalry between its leader, Thakin Soe, and Thakin Than Tun, the White Flag chief.

To confuse matters further, there are five other Communist groups in Burma, none of any significance. The combined strength of the White and Red Flag Communists has been officially estimated at about 10,000.

3. The White Band People's Volunteer Organization. This is a band of young men who participated in the Aung San resistance movement late in the war and were later nursed along by the British and Americans. They took to the jungle late in the summer of 1948 and are in rather shaky alliance with the White Flage Reds.

4. The Karen National Organization. The Karens are anti-government but are reputed also to be anti-Communist, although there have been times when they seemed to have a working arrangement with the Reds. The Karens are one of Burma's many racial minorities They differ from the ruling Burmese in language, tribal origin and cultural background.

Although there are three million people of Karen origin in Burma, they are widely dispersed. Nevertheless, a settlement with the Karens in indispensable. It is not yet in sight. The Karens went into rebellion for an autonomous Karen state. The government is now ready to concede most of the original Baren terms, but the Karens' demands have grown in proportion to their military successes.

Attitude Toward West

Significant changes are discernible in the Burmese government's attitude toward the West. When the Burmese gained independence they were cockily self-confident and almost hysterically suspicious of Western influence. Toward the Communists the government took a conciliatory and compromising attitude.

Recently the Premier admitted in Parliament the country's inability to meet its needs wholly from internal resources and announced the intention of seeking foreign capital and technical assistance while at the same time opposing foreign domination.

Burma needs help, and needs it badly. To many observers it appears that a cooperative effort with other countries through the United Nations would do the most good. But disorder is so advanced and the picture is so confused that it is questionable how best to tackle this thorny problem. In view of Burma's chip-on-shoulder nationalism, any indiscreet approach runs the danger of provoking criticism as a new form of imperialism or as pure political expediency in the Cold War.

MRS. DORA KRATOSCHKA BRANDT,

Brant, who temporarily gave up his American citizenship to hasten their marriage last April. Brandt renounced his citizenship because he feared red tape would delay their wedding, but retracted his oath when officials assured him the red tape would be cut. The two have been separated since three days after their marriage, when Brandt left for the United States to become an engineering student

Chiang Asks 'Total' Defense Of Formosa

Hongkong, Oct. 25 (AP).—Chiang Kai-shek called today for total mobilization to defend Formosa against a possible Communist attempt to seize the big island as a base for "invasion of the western Pacific."

As Chiang spoke, Red amphibious forces were attacking Chinmen Island, last Nationalist toehold on the "invasion coast" from which any Communist attack on Formosa would have to be launched.

Nationalist reports said Chinmen's defenders threw back the Reds, inflicting heavy damage on the two divisions that sought to invade the island.

Chiang and Chen Cheng, governor of Formosa, called on the people of the island for an all-out effort to repel the expected attack.

Meanwhile, heavy fighting was reported 230 miles northeast of Chungking, and the Nationalist "refugee government" was reported ready to abandon the inland city at any moment.

Fatal A-Blast Rays' Life Put in Minutes

Scientist Says

Peace Use Of A-Power Is Remote

By David McConnell
NYHT News Service

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 25 (U.P.).—The age of atomic-powered automobiles, airplanes or engines to operate America's industry is many years away, an atomic scientist said tonight.

The warning came from Dr. D. G. Suits, director of research for the General Electric Co., which is operating one of the United States Atomic Energy Commission's most important postwar atomic power laboratories.

In the first place, Suits said the Government would have to spend about 200 million dollars to build a number of successive experimental atomic power plants before the economic possibilities of atomic energy could be judged.

Even then, he said, there is no present assurance that after such an expenditure, the final economic result would be successful. There are too many unanswered technical questions, he said.

"If a profitable atomic industry does develop," he said, "it will be decades away."

Suits spoke at a dinner tonight in connection with the annual fall meeting of the National Academy of Sciences.

[The Associated Press quoted Dr. Suits as saying the time may come when a single purchase of atomic energy fuel will last you a lifetime and you can bequeath it to your children still undiminished.

[There is one "if," Dr. Suits said, namely whether the uranium you burn can be made to reproduce as much or more fuel while you use it. The prospects are fair, but not yet developed.—Editor's Note.]

The deputy surgeon general of the Army asserted yesterday that death-dealing radiation from an atomic air blast lasts for only a matter of minutes in a bombed area.

Maj. Gen. George E. Armstrong debunked as untrue, though of "powerful psychological portent," current beliefs that cities such as Hiroshima and Nagasaki remained dangerous to rescue workers for long periods after they were bombed. He said that hundreds of casualties in the two Japanese cities could have been saved by prompt and well organized medical assistance.

An incident involving General Armstrong's discussion of atomic defense measures before the International Congress of Military Medicine in Mexico City emphasized the changing concept of steps needed to be taken in the event of attack. Inadvertently an unrevised text of his talk—prepared last March—was released to the press in Mexico City, his office said here.

Employes in the surgeon general's office in Washington explained that when the talk was rechecked last month it was found that new research had proved some of the conclusions reached at that time were either untrue or out of date. Copies of the revised text were released here.

In discussing civilian defense measures, General Armstrong described schemes for underground shelters as "prohibitive in their cost and the time involved." He also called them "impractical."

Instead of shelters, he asserted, adequate disaster plans, including organization of medical personnel and materials at strategic places in a city, are needed. He warned that a city suffering an atomic attack would need stockpiles of whole blood, plasma, bandage and wound dressing materials placed where they would be least likely to be destroyed by the blast.

On the basis of studies made by the surgeon general's office in Hiroshima and Nagasaki, General Armstrong said buildings in cities should be marked out as potential collecting points for the injured.

"These collecting points should be outside the area of destruction not because of radioactivity but because of the fires which sweep the area of destruction," he said. "By swift rescue work many hundreds will be saved from the fires, which, in the case of Hiroshima, completely enveloped the area within an hour after the explosion."

General Armstrong said "flash burns" caused the most widespread type of injury in the bombings of Hiroshima and Nagaski. Persons as far as 4000 yards away from the blast were burned over parts of their bodies not protected by clothing, he said.

Civil Defense Study Planned

The District Commissioners yesterday agreed that "consideration should be given" to establishing a civil defense plan for the District.

Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, District Engineer Commissioner, was directed to submit preliminary recommendations on the subject in the near future.

Reason for their decision, the Commissioners announced, was a letter received recently from the National Security Resources Board "encouraging" setting up such a plan. The letter was sent by John R. Steelman, acting chairman of the board, to the Governors of the States and the Commissioners of the District.

BACK-SEAT CONFERENCE—Defense Secretary Louis Johnson (right) and Navy Secretary Francis Matthews read a document in Johnson's car after leaving the White House, where they conferred with President Truman. When asked if the Navy high command would be changed, Johnson replied, "No comment" ing the three-week congressional inquiry.

As to conclusions, Johnson replied:

"Not at this time."

Besides Johnson and Matthews, the Pentagon meeting of civilian heads of the armed forces was attended by Deputy Secretary of Defense Stephen Early, Acting Army Secretary Tracy Voorhees and Acting Air Secretary Eugene Zuckert.

Both Army Secretary Gordon Gray and Air Secretary W. Stuart Symington were out of the city.

Purge of Officers Called Red Tactic

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—Outspoken Rear Admiral Dan Gallery believes that purging officers who don't agree with Pentagon unification policy would be adopting the Russian technique.

He set down this idea today in an article on "Don't Let's Cripple the Navy," written for the current edition of the Saturday Evening Post.

Gallery was chief of the guided missiles section of Denfeld's naval operations office until last summer when he was transferred to duties with the Atlantic fleet as deputy commander for operational development.

Gallery wrote in his latest article:

"Our system of government is founded on free and open discussion of controversial ideas. In the halls of Congress this is called debating, but the newspapers currently refer to such discussions, when conducted by military officers, as 'bickering.'

"Of course, one way to stop this so-called bickering is to knock a few heads together, lay down the party line from the top and purge everyone who does not conform to it. However, I don't think the Communists have as yet succeeded in converting us so far toward their system that we will adopt this method."

(Defense Secretary Johnson has been described as the source of the phrase "knocking heads together" in private comments on the armed forces controversy.)

At another point, Gallery suggested that guided missiles may give battleships a new lease on life.

U. S. Vice Consul Shot On Colombian Street

Earl R. Michalka of Houston, Tex., a United States vice consul at Cali, Colombia, was shot in the leg on a Cali street Saturday, the State Department reported yesterday.

Department officials described his wound as slight. They had no details of the shooting but press reports have told of political clashes on Cali streets.

Tuck Gathers Data to Decide Whether to Seize Arnold Line

Richmond, Va., Oct. 25 (AP).—Governor Tuck today took steps to assemble information on which to base a decision as to whether the State will seize the Washington, Virginia and Maryland Coach Company (Arnold Line) in event of a strike by bus operators on November 2.

Under the State's Public Utilities Labor Relations Act, the Governor could order state seizure of the line if it is considered necessary to safeguard the welfare and safety of the public.

The Governor's office announced he had wired the District of Columbia Commissioners asking if they wanted buses to operate into Washington in evnet the State has to take over the line. The reply was "yes".

Telegrams also have been sent to the chairman of the Board of Supervisors of Fairfax County, and the chairman of the Board of Arlington County to get their views as to the need of State operation if a strike develops.

The bus company runs intra-State between points in Arlington and Fairfax Counties, and inter-State into the District of Columbia. It's employes, represented by the Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway & Motor Coach Employes of America (AFL) have served notice they will strike at 12:10 a. m. November 2 unless the company puts into effect before then pay increases awarded by an arbitration board September 9.

Another strike notice, effective at 12:01 a. m. December 11, also has been served by the union in connection with another pay question. The union says it will strike on the December date unless the pay dating from May 18.

The bus company has said it is unable to pay the increases unless it obtains fare boosts, and an application for fare adjustments is before the State Corporation Commission. The hearing on the company's application began last Wednesday, but has been continued until November 14 at 10 a. m.

The action announced today by the Governor's office was similar to the procedure followed recently prior to the time the State found it necessary to take over operation of the Alexandria, Barcroft & Washintgon bus line, which also operates in the northern Virginia area and runs into Washington. The A B & W still is being run by the State.

1200 End Walkout Over Christmas Bonus

Hazleton, Pa., Oct. 25 (AP).—Some 1200 workers have returned to their jobs at the Duplan Company's textile mills here after a walkout over Christmas bonuses.

The men and women returned to their jobs yesterday after the company announced the 2 per cent bonus on annual wages paid last year at Christmas will be repeated this year "if the company makes the money." There had been rumors the bonus would not be paid.

Carillon Bill Signed

Army to Release All Its Draftees

June who had been evading the law, no one has been inducted since last January 31, Hershey said. The postwar draft was only in effect for about four months last fall and winter and approximately 24,000 inductees are still in uniform. The Navy and Air Force did not draft anyone then.

Gray said the reduction to a 630,000-man Army will require the Department to cut out 26,000 men now in uniform. It represents, however, a slash of 47,000 from the 677,000-man strength authorized for this year.

The Army chief indicated that the manpower slash will not mean eliminating any of the present 11 divisions.

"We are attempting to absorb the cut," he told the 1500 guard leaders, "in our overhead and service troops, with the least possible damage to our active combat units, at home and overseas, which we hope to maintain at approximately their present level—a bare minimum to the Nation's security needs."

He noted that the 630,000-man force will have to "carry out essentially the same missions and activities" as the present Army. Some functions will be "eliminated or streamlined," Gray said, but basically the Army's responsibilities will remain unchanged.

Some Army posts and installations will be closed, the Secretary said cryptically, without identifying them.

He cheered the Guard leaders by telling them there would be no cuts in the National Guard and reserve budget either this year or next. In fact, Gray added, there will be an increase for the civilian components—the only major program to be expanded.

Gray's draft and budget cut announcements overshadowed new developments in the major controversies of the convention.

They are the National Guard-Air Force row and the allied feud between Maj. Gen. Kenneth F. Cramer, chief of the National Guard Bureau, and Maj. Gen. George G. Finch, chief of the bureau's Air Force Division.

Both schisms spilled out on the convention floor today. Secretary Gray interpolated a remark in his prepared speech indicating that he is backing Cramer to the limit in his split with Finch.

"For my money and the Department of Army money," he said, "Kenneth F. Cramer is one fine National Guard leader."

Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord of Maryland also publicly backed Cramer. In an attack on Air Force attempts to "federalize" the Air Guard, he told the convention:

"Of all things, gentlemen, let's protect the National Guard Bureau in this fight and the chief of the National Guard Bureau who has done such a remarkable job."

Earlier, Cramer charged that Finch, and Air Force officers were attempting to split up the National Guard Bureau. Without mentioning names, he declared that the motive behind the present row is to accomplish federalization of the Guard "by indirection."

The aim, he said, is to bring about separate Army and Air Force National Guard bureaus and "bring those bureaus more completely under Federal control.

Hoak Skips Controversies

Maj. Gen. Earl S. Hoag, new Air Force staff officer for Guard-Reserve affairs, also addressed the convention today.

He avoided mention of the controversies, but set forth the USAF position on a training plan under attack by Guard chiefs. It provides for 48-hour weekend training periods rather than two-hour weekly drills.

Air Guardsmen cannot be readied for war under such brief periods, Hoag declared. He offered minor modifications of the plan to make it more acceptable to the Guard.

Army Secretary Gray, who headed the board which recommended federalization of the entire Guard, promised the association the Army will make no attempt to bring about this" by subterfuge or administrative action".

Hailed By Reckord, Walsh

Reckord and Maj. Gen. Ellard Walsh, president of the Guardsmen, hailed Gray's statement in a new floor assault on the Air Force.

"The Air Force has not been interested in training the Guard," said Reckord, "it is only interested in learning how they can obtain command of the air guard . . ."

Reckord hit the new Air Force plan to create an air staff in each staff independent of the adjutant general. None will be created in Maryland under these circumstances, he declared.

John P. Bracken, president of the Reserve Officers Association, backed the Guard in its fight against federalization. He urged appointment of a joint Guard Association ROA to bring about "closer integration" of the Guard and Reserve.

New Parking Curbs On Pennsylvania Ave.

In an effort to relieve traffic congestion, the District Commissioners yesterday adopted parking restrictions along four blocks of Pennsylvania ave. from 28th st. se. to Branch ave.

At the recommendation of George E. Keneipp, director of vehicles and traffic, the Commissioners prohibited parking on the north side of Penn ave. from 7 a. m. to 9:30 a. m. and on the south side from 4 p. m. to 6:30 p. m.

Truman Signs Bill For Guided Missiles

President Truman yesterday signed legislation authorizing construction of a guided missile research laboratory.

Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.), author of the bill, said it will permit the construction of a special laboratory costing $1,900,000, to be operated by the National Bureau of Standards.

Johnson said the site of the laboratory will be up to military officials.

Rep. Irving's Secretary Quits in Office Tiff

By the United Press

Representative Leonard T. Irving (D., Mo.), a labor leader and President Truman's home town Congressman, had a labor problem in his own office yesterday.

It ended with the resignation of Vernon E. Moore, also from Independence, Mo., from his $7,200-a-year job as secretary to Irving because the Congressman had locked him out of the office.

Irving denied that the tiff with his secretary resulted from a report that Moore plans to run for his congressional seat.

The Congressman said he intended to reorganize" his office staff before Congress reconvenes in January anyhow in the interest of more "efficiency and cooperation."

Moore, who was secretary to former Representative Jasper Bell for 12 years when Bell had Irving's seat, said in a statement to reporters that he resigned yesterday by mail because he was unable to contact Irving and the Capitol office was closed to him.

Moore said the argument went back to last June when Irving took office keys away from his staff.

"The opening of the office each day has depended on the whim of the Congressman," Moore said. "At one time, as many as three bags of mail were allowed to accumulate in the postoffice.

"I have often wondered what he may have had in the office which he felt should be kept under such strong lock-and-key arrangements."

Irving is an official of local 264 of the AFL hod carriers' union. In a Kansas City lawsuit, an accounting of union funds has been asked. He denounced the legal action as "a scheme to embarrass me and the President."

CIO's Rival Wings Back Steel Strike

The 51-member executive board, meeting to prepare for next week's free-swinging showdown between the leftist and anti-Communist leaders in convention, adopted a unanimous resolution on the strike.

It pledged "full moral, organizational and financial support in this strike which the steel industry, on orders from Wall Street, has forced upon the Steelworkers and the American people.

Walter Reuther, red-headed leader of the United Auto Workers and sometimes regarded as a possible successor to Murray, introduced the resolution at a three-hour session of the executive board.

To back up his resolution, Reuther's own UAW executive board voted to a man to contribute $100,000 to the steelworkers' strike fund as a starter.

Reuther Heads Resolutions

Reuther was chosen chairman of the powerful resolutions committee for the convention, starting next Monday. That means he and big Joe Curran, head of the National Maritime Union and secretary of the committee, will have a lot to say about what happens to pro-Communist forces in the CIO.

Reuther and Curran both have been successful in battling Communist-sympathizers in the ranks of their important auto and sailors' unions.

One of the big fights certain to erupt on the convention floor involves the "ultimatum" of the United Electrical Workers. The demands were that unless Murray ousts the worst critics of UE's left-wing leadership and orders a stop to raiding of its ranks by right-wing unions, the UE will hold back its per capita tax to the CIO.

UE Third Largest CIO Unit

UE, the CIO's third largest union, holds contracts to represent about 600,000 workers in the radio, television and electrical manufacturing fields. It pays the 8-cent monthly per capita to the CIO on about 375,000 actual members, however. It is the largest and most influential of the unions under so-called left-wing leadership.

President Albert J. Fitzgerald and his top aides in running UE—Secretary-Treasurer Julius Emspak and Organization Director James J. Matles—were conspicuously absent from today's executive board session. Fitzgerald, a vice president of the CIO, also missed yesterday's meeting of the nine vice presidents.

One possible development at the convention next week may be the ouster of all leftists from the CIO's executive board or slate of officers.

Beirne May Get Nod

If Fitzgerald is dropped as a vice-president, it was reliably reported that Joseph A. Beirne, president of the CIO's new union in the telephone industry, the Communications Workers of America, will get the nod.

A credentials committee headed by tough little Allan S. Haywood, organizational director of the CIO, will pass on whether two comparatively weak left-wing unions shall seat their delegates. The CIO constitution allows member unions to get behind only two months in their per capita payments. Murray disclosed that two unions, which he did not identify, were that far in arrears.

& Ohio has eliminated trains 177 and 178, between Washington and Brunswick, Md.)

Southern coal operators, representing about a sixth of the soft coal industry, reported Monday they were handed an ultimatum demanding higher pay, a seven-hour day and a bigger welfare fund royalty for the striking miners.

President Joseph E. Moody of the Southern Coal Producers Association said "we're certainly pessimistic as the devil tonight."

Ching, Steelman Confer

On the steel front, Cyrus S. Ching, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, spent 45 minutes at the White House to bring John Steelman, the President's labor adviser, up to date on his week's discussions with representatives on U. S. Steel. Shortly before Ching visited the White House, Charles G. Ross, the President's press secretary, told reporters that the President had no plans as yet to intervene in either strike.

Ching talked for several hours yesterday with J. M. Larkin, vice president of the Bethlehem Steel Corp., and John Morse, the company's counsel. Afterward, Ching said: "I would say it could be summed up in two words 'no progress.'"

Ching planned to return to New York today for more talks with officials of the U. S. Steel Corp.

A pessimistic note on the steel strike—begun October 1 by 500,000 CIO Steelworkers seeking noncontributory welfare benefits—was sounded yesterday by Irving S. Olds, chairman of United States Steel.

Olds issued a statement that "the steel strike continues without any end immediately in sight." He estimated that as a result of the strike, United States Steel has thus far lost 2,200,000 tons of steel; and that United States Steel strikers have lost approximately 46 million dollars in wages. He blamed Philip Murray, president of the Steelworkers for the strike, and for the consequences "if a depression should result" from the prolonged walkout.

In Cleveland, the CIO executive committee momentarily forgot its right-vs.-left differences and unanimously pledged "full moral, organizational and financial support" for the steel strike. Phil Murray is president of the CIO as well as the Steelworkers. Murray told reporters he had no idea when the strike would end. He said the strikers' morale was high, and that they would stay out until they won noncontributory social insurance and pensions.

General Electric, meanwhile, announced a shutdown of its plant at Tiffin, Ohio, because of the steel strike. Around 500 workers will be furloughed. Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co. announced the layoff of 200 men for lack of steel plate. More than 12,000 pier workers have been idled by the double strike at Newport News, Va.

International UE Head Fired By Own Local

Lynn, Mass., Oct. 25 (AP).—Albert J. Fitzgerald, international president of the United Electrical Workers (CIO), has been expelled from his own local union.

Members charged him with "conduct inimical to the interests of the union" for leading a left-wing slate at the national convention in Cleveland a month ago.

Fitzgerald supporters said his expulsion would not affect his $7500-a-year job as the union's international president.

Fitzgerald found himself in the unusual position of defying a mandate from leaders of his own local in voting for himself as international president. They had indorsed Fred M. Kelley, business agent of the Lynn local.

The showdown came last night at an uproarious membership meeting of the Lynn local—one of the UE's largest, with 17,000 members.

More than 1000 turned out for the session and shouted down Fitzgrald defenders.

Going beyond the recommendation of the Lynn local's executive board to suspend Fitzgerald and three other delegates who went along with him at Cleveland, the members voted instead to expel all four.

Court Hearing Friday In Union Merger Row

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—A State Supreme Court hearing has been set for Friday in a dispute over the proposed merger of two leftist-led CIO unions.

The unions involved in the litigation are the United Electrical Workers and the smaller United Farm Equipment and Metal Workers.

Supreme Court Justice Julius Miller issued an order yesterday directing the two unions to show cause Friday why a referendum among the farm equipment union members on the issue of merging with the bigger union should not be voided.

The merger opposition is led by Peter Aversa of Auburn, N. Y., president of District 6 of the Farm Equipment Workers. He contends the merger is a step toward formation of a new labor federation that would be Communist-led.

Halloween Pranks Set for Greenbelt

Greenbelt will sponsor no glass-breaking this Halloween, but the kids may enjoy every other prank that goes with the occasion, City Manager Charles T. McDonald said yesterday.

The announcement cleared up some confusion caused by earlier reports that city-supervised Halloween activities would be called off entirely.

The recreation department, McDonald said, cut out the scheduled glass-breaking after protests from Greenbelt parents.

Still left on the agenda is the Sunday night program for youngsters which will include a "trick or treat" contest, and a Monday night program for older children featuring a window-soaping art contest on 38 big store windows.

Pressmen May Seek Berry Estate Share

Washington Local No. 1 of the AFL Printing Pressmen's Union has elected a slate of officers expected to back the local in its fight for a large share of the estate of the late George L. Berry, long-time president of the international union.

The officers chosen Monday night at Pythian Temple are headed by Louis A. Lopez(who was recently ousted by the international union as legislative representative. He won by 345 to 165 over Raymond J. Roche, who was regarded as a backer of the international.

In two other important contests Stanley D. Bradshaw defeated Edward P. Best for financial secretary by a vote of 341 to 167, while Henry G. Klamp won over Charles Folk for recording secretary, 312 to 190.

Best opposed the investigation of the international's gnancial affairs demanded by the Washington local.

For the executive board of the local, Leo Routhier won over the incumbent, John Berry, by 251 to 223. Other board members were unopposed, as was Frank Gritton, elected treasurer.

International officers charged Local No. 1 with violation of several by-laws

Meet Bill Freeman—Another "Do-it-yourself" American

Made his ideas add up!

No convincing William E. Freeman of Atlanta, Georgia, that a shop helper can't make himself new opportunities—today especially! Even with time out for three years' Navy duty in the war, Freeman worked up from truck repairman in 1939 to a supervisor's job with H. W. Lay Co. in 1946. He kept a sharp eye out for opportunities for plant improvements. And he made his ideas work! Without a high school diploma, he taught himself about machine layout, processing, packaging. For Freeman it all added up to a key executive's spot. Today at 37, he's plant engineer... and he got there on his own!

☆ It's the American Spirit!

BILL FREEMAN would be the first to tell you he's no exception; you'll find folks like him on every Main Street in the country. Folks who today are opening up "new frontiers" for themselves in the American "do-it-yourself" spirit. They're making their own energy and ideas add up to a better life for themselves and their families—and for America!

An example of the strength of this do-it-yourself spirit is all around you: 78 million Americans, wanting to take care of their own on their own, are providing for their wives and children through life insurance. Their life insurance serves another way, as well. It indirectly makes opportunities for more jobs, for better schools and highways . . . for better living. These opportunities come from life insurance dollars invested in industry and government, in homes and on farms.

Since life insurance does so much for so many, more and more people turn to it every year. While life insurance must grow to meet their needs, the business remains a personal business, too. For each of the country's 150,000 trained life insurance agents gives his individual service to the men and women in his community. These Agents represent 584 individual life insurance companies competing actively to help Americans help themselves!

It's a Fact...

It's a fact that the earnings on life insurance assets are of direct financial importance to every policyholder . . . because:

- The premiums you pay do not cover all the costs of insuring you.
- Income earned by the investment of life insurance assets pays part of the cost. Out of each dollar of total income of all life insurance companies, about 80¢ now comes from premiums and about 20¢ from investment earnings.
- If the rate of interest available on prudent investments were higher, the cost of life insurance to you could be lower.

LIFE INSURANCE—Helping American Families to Help Themselves

Tie Between Diet and Disease Resistance Questioned in Vitamins Court Hearing

A Government nutrition expert testified here yesterday that it is scientifically doubtful that a well-fed person is better able to resist disease than a less well-fed person.

The statement was made in a bitterly fought District Court case testing the power of the Food and Drug Administration over advertising in vitamin sales. The case has once been to the Supreme Court on preliminary matters and testimony is now being taken. The case is in its final stages.

The action was brought by Mytinger & Casselberry, Inc., distributors of Nutrilite Food Supplement, described by them as a $500,000 a month business. The product is distributed directly to consumers at $200 for a year's supply.

Charges Harassment

Challenging the Government's procedure in the case as unconstitutional, the company claims it is being harassed and its products seized and condemned without a hearing.

The chief Government witness yesterday was E. M. Nelson, chief of the division of nutrition of the Food and Drug Administration.

He said:

"It is wholly unscientific to state that a well-fed body is more able to resist disease than a less well-fed body. My over-all opinion is that there hasn't been enough experimentation to prove dietary deficincies make one more susceptible to disease."

Claims Called Extravagant

He made the statement in support of the Government's contention that literature distributed to Nutrilite consumers contains extravagant claims as to its efficacy in relation to heart disease, overfatigue, insomnia, poor appetite, and aches.

Judge T. Alan Goldsborough, one of three jurists hearing the case, immediately began questioning Nelson, a chemist and Ph. D.

"In China and India they die like flies," Goldsborough said. "I lived in China for six years and they die like flies. Isn't it true that there is less disease in general in races that have the best substantial diet?"

"I think that is true," replied Nelson.

Goldsborough also questioned Government assertions as to fatigue in relation to food.

Spring Reconditioning

"When I was a boy," he said, "I lived on a diet of fresh pork and sweet potatoes while at school for most of the winter. But my mother would clear up my condition in two weeks with good spring foods."

Nelson also testified that it is a controversial question whether vitamin administration generally makes a person less susceptible to disease.

He said experiments on monkeys and mice showed that animals with a vitamin B-1 deficiency were more difficult to infect with poliomyelitis.

The Nutrilite firm and Government agree that the product is safe for consumption but the controversy is as to its value.

The company denies that any claims are made as to cure by the vitamins, but asserts that the efficacy of vitamins as preventive agencies are acknowledged by professional men.

Truman Signs Bill Changing Tax Laws

President Truman signed into law today a bill making numerous technical changes in the Federal tax laws, including 16 extra days for farmers to pay their income taxes.

Heretofore farmers have been required to file a declaration of estimated tax by January 15 following the year in which the liability was incurred. The new law gives the farmers until January 31.

and propounded his theory to prove them celestial visitors. The six, he said, proved of optimal size for survival in that they were small enough to pass off the heat generated by atmospheric friction and so remain below their melting point.

Chemical techniques for analysis of unknown materials in such minute quantity are still lacking, and new methods must be devised. In the meantime, Dr. Whipple said, further specimens might be found by searches in ocean sediments, glacial snows and other geologic strata.

Dr. Landsberb, executive director of the committee on geophysics and geography, Research and Development Board, last night belittled his contribution, declaring:

"I caught them all right, but Dr. Whipple did all the work on them."

He said he placed the glycerin-coated slides on an observatory platform at Mount Weather, near Purcellville, Va., and in his Arlington garden before, during and after the great giacooinid meteor shower of October, 1946. A similar, though futile, attempt was made by other scientists some 35 years before to ttry to catch fragments from Halley's Comet, periodic visitor to Earth's sky.

Dr. Landsberg, who now lives on Shreve rd., Falls Church, Va., said the slides trapped "hundreds and hundreds" of dust particles which were painstakingly eliminated as earthborn in origin. But two on his garden slides and four on the observatory ones persistentlv defied such explanition.

He described them as streamlined in rocket shape, opaque, very heavy for their size, unburned, and with the magnetic properties of iron. They were found on slides exposed during the third day after the meteor shower, a time lapse needed for the fall through distances calculated by radar devices by the National Bureau of Standards, Dr. Landsberg said.

Though they have ever since been suspect of celestial origin, he said, they were never accepted as such till Dr. Whipple's explanation because they showed no signs of the fusing effects observed on all larger meteor fragments which reach the earth.

Debt Load Attacked by U. N. Club

The newly-elected board of directors of the United Nations club, 1701 19th st. nw., began efforts at a meeting at the clubhouse last night to get the organization out from under a $32,000 debt load.

At the meeting, the new directors:

Appointed a finance committee to review a detailed financial statement of the club, to be received in a day or two and then call a meeting of the entire board.

Appointed a membership committee to begin immediate efforts to raise the membership from its present 500 figure to 1000, which it once was.

Decided informally that no increase in dues or special assessments will be levied.

Postponed election of new officers pending "further study of the club's condition and plans for bettering it."

Appointed a special committee on revision of the bylaws.

Richard E. Shands, a Washington attorney who lives at McLean, Va., said that the full board probably will meet late this week after the financial report is completed. He was one of only two members of the former board of directors chosen on the new board.

Iceland Reds Lose Parliament Seat

Reykjavik, Iceland, Oct. 25 (AP).—Communists lost 1 of their 10 seats in Iceland's Parliament in returns from the country's general election.

Final results are expected Saturday.

The Communists, who opposed both Iceland's joining the North Atlantic Pact and American operation of the Keflavik airport, dropped a seat to the Progressive (agrarian) Party in Reykjavik.

Complete returns in the capital showed the Independence (conservative) Party reelected four members. Social Democratic returned one and the Communists reelected two.

Bay Stater Favored for Health Post

The District Commissioners received the report of the health officer selection committee at their regular meeting yesterday but took no action.

They confirmed, however, that the committee's recommendations for District Health Officer in order of preference, were:

Dr. Vlado A. Getting, Massachusetts Commissioner of Health;

Dr. Irwin C. Sage, Assistant Health Officer of San Francisco; and

Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, Assistant Health Officer of the District.

The selection committee also informed the Commissioners that both Getting and Sage said they would be interested in the job only if it carried the $14,500 requested in next year's burget. The position now pays $10,300.

The report was sent to the Commissioners' meeting by Commissioner Guy Mason, who has been ill at home the last two weeks.

Mason, the Commissioner in charge of the Health Department, has not yet indicated his choice of candidates, it was stated. Final selection is expected later this week.

'Oliver Twist' Movie Banned in Canada

Quebec, Oct. 25 (U.P.).—Premier Maurice Duplessis today confirmed he had issued instructions to the provincial film censorship board to ban the film "Oliver Twist."

Duplessis said he had received representations from several sources including Montreal City Councillor Max Seigler.

The Quebec premier said he had ordered the film banned "so as not to provoke useless frictions" and "to give another proof of our traditional broadmindedness and of our desire of cooperation between races."

Treason Jury Hears Broadcast Records

The first two recordings of the wartime propaganda broadcasts of "Station D-E-B-U-N-K, the station of all free Americans," were played in District Court yesterday in the treason trial of Herbert J. Burgman.

The Government charges that during the war the 53-year-old former clerk in the American Embassy at Berlin made a series of treasonous broadcasts under the alias "Joe Scanlon."

In Judge Alexander Holtzoff's court, the jury of seven men and five women listened over earphones to "The Star Spangled Banner," "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny" and "Inside information" on these "choice news items of the day":

1. "Since social diseases among society girls in and around Atlanta are spreading like wildfire, one thinks it would be best for our Northern boys to make some kind of arrangement and allow prostitutes to live on Fort McPherson's premises."

2. 'The treatment of prisoners in Japanese hands was not bad at all."

3. "While personally driving an open car . . . Gen. Douglas MacArthur yesterday ran into a group of American soldiers engaged in building a road. Three of the men . . . died before medical aid could be rendered. It had been a hot and sultry day and at sundown General MacArthur went out for a drive to cool off."

4. "In a secret session a large number of American shipbuilders of great reputation explained to President Roosevelt it will be impossible to win the race—cargo-vessels versus U-boats . . . President Roosevelt, worried and more nervous than ever, was not able to decide what should be done. He was so tired that he even fell asleep during the session which had taken place in his bedroom."

The recordings played yesterday were made during June and July 1942, in Berlin, according to the Government, and seized by Army authorities after the war. Similar recordings were made at monitoring stations in Silver Hill and Laurel, Md.

Throughout the playing of the two half-hour records, Burgman followed the voice of "Joe Scanlon" closely with a transcript of the broadcasts. A slight, balding man in a rumpled blue suit, with jutting bushy eyebrows, he showed little emotion.

In addition to the "news items" which would start out "Flash, from Sydney, Australia," or "Flash, from Washington, D. C.," the broadcasts contained discussions by Scanlon and a person identified only as "Arthur."

American listeners were told that "none other than Franklin D. Roosevelt and his Jewish and Communistic pals . . . put that crazy war over on us."

Earlier in the day, Prosecutor William Paisley submitted in evidence a mimeographed transcript of all broadcasts he is charging that Burgman made. Defense Counsel James J. Laughlin objected to its introduction, and asked for the opportunity to hear the recordings in court without the jury. Judge Holtzoff denied his request.

Before introducing the transcript, Paisley questioned two witnesses, Frank Z. Green, war-time chief of the Silver Hill monitoring station, and Miss Gwendolyn Baptist, a Federal Communications Commission employe.

Green testified he had "personally recorded" from 25 to 30 of the D-E-B-U-N-K broadcasts, and that the station had monitored "perhaps four or five hundred."

Miss Baptist said she listened to the speeches, transcribed them on a typewriter from the recordings and personally checked for accuracy the transcript of the broadcasts, which the Government submitted in evidence.

Scene of Farmer's Shotgun Spree

BAR ALL SHOT—A policeman in Waterford, Mich., points out direction of shotgun blasts which hit four persons in the Waterford Hotel bar, one of two taverns shot up by a crazed, middle-aged farmer on a mad spree which ended when he fired a final charge through his own chest. Two of his victims, both women, are critically injured

JOE RUNYON, 57, terrorized the sleepy resort village of Waterford by tramping back and forth across a street, firing seven or eight charges from a 12-gauge shotgun through windows of the taverns. Runyon rapidly reloaded his single-shot weapon

U. S. Aid for Hospitals Now 150 Millions

President Truman signed into law yesterday a bill authorizing 150 million dollars a year in Federal aid for hospital construction.

Under an existing law, expiring in 1951, the Federal Government may spend 75 million dollars a year to provide one third of the construction costs of hospitals.

The new bill extends the old law to 1955 and provides a flexible formula under which Federal contributions will range from one-third to two-thirds, depending on the per capita incomes of States.

Shoplifter Threatened, Appeals to Prosecutor

St. Joseph, Mo., Oct. 25 (AP)—A shoplifter, who has received anonymous letters chiding her over a theft two months ago, appealed in a letter today to the prosecuting attorney's office.

Louis Jacobs, evidence officer, said the woman signed the letter and openly admitted the theft. Someone who recognized her apparently saw her steal a pocketbook from a department store and has been plaguing her with letters threatening to have her "thrown out" of her church.

Jacobs wrote back today, saying he didn't believe his office could do anything about it.

Be Ahead Today with Hudson "Step-Down" Design
120,000 former owners of other makes say:
"Get tomorrow's motoring advantages...right now!"

40 YEARS OF ENGINEERING LEADERSHIP

HERE'S a wonderful way to meet the future! And here's the car to meet it in! For the New Hudson is the future—the car that's years ahead, thanks to its unique "step-down" design!

Here's the car that will spoil you for any other make—once you've taken the wheel and put the New Hudson through all its superb paces!

Here's the car that brings you not just a little "more", but the most of the four big advantages people want most in motoring . . . the most beauty, roominess, road-worthiness and all-round performance. Yes, only in Hudson do you get the priceless advantages of "step-down" design—the basic improvement that makes so much extra value possible.

Take road-worthiness, for example:

Hudson's recessed floor and "step-down" design provide the lowest center of gravity in any American stock car—yet there's full road clearance. Result: the safest, steadiest, hug-the-road ride ever known!

Make your date with tomorrow now; drive in with your present car, and find out for yourself why, of the more than quarter-million owners of the New Hudson, 120,000 are people who have traded in cars of other makes to own this exciting automobile. You'll be delighted, too, with the deal you can make on a years-ahead New Hudson!

HUDSON A LEADER IN RESALE VALUE! Come in today and ask to see the figures from National Automobile Dealers Association Official Used Car Guide Books which prove that "step-down" designed New Hudsons command top prices in the nation's used-car markets.

Widow Tells Jury How Engel Wooed

Chicago, Oct. 25 (AP).—A red-haired widow told a jury today how Sigmund (Sam) Engel brought love, European fashion, into her life at a cost of $8700.

"He kissed each of my fingers," Mrs. Reseda Corrigan, 39, of Chicago testified.

"And my ears and my neck," she went on. "And my little feet."

She held her hands so the jury could see them, but she did not remove her shoes in the courtroom where Engel is on trial on a charge of operating a confidence game.

Engel, 73, and white-haired, sat nearby with a later object of his ardent affections. She is Mrs. Pauline Langton Engel of New York, erstwhile complainant turned devoted wife and defender of Sam's faith.

Mrs. Corrigan took the criminal court jury down the road to romance that began on busy Michigan blvd. and ended in the Newark, N. J., airport—a bride-to-be left at the altar and without her bankroll.

She was on Michigan blvd. when a man grabbed her hands, she said, and remarked, "Amazing, amazing, amazing!"

"Unhand me, villain," Mrs. Corrigan recalled telling him.

But he went on to say what was so amazing—Mrs. Corrigan's resemblance to his poor, dead wife.

"He was very nice," she told the jury. "We went to a restaurant. I had just had a singing lesson. He said he was a movie producer and promised to put me into the movies."

Engel has posed variously as Sam Engel, a Hollywood producer, and Carl Laemmle, jr., film magnate.

"He phoned me often," Mrs. Corrigan continued. "He took me everywhere. And every day three boxes of flowers!

"We rode in taxis; he said he'd left his cars and chauffeur in California."

Mrs. Corrigan told next of a pathetic scene in Milwaukee when Engel's words really touched her heart.

"We went to a cemetery. He held my hand and talked to the graves where he said his parents lay in rest.

"He looked at the ground, held my hand and said, 'I love this girl, and I know you would love her, too.'"

Mrs. Corrigan said that when she once confided to Engel that she didn't even know how to withdraw money from her savings account, he helpfully showed her how.

"Freddie (she called him Freddie then) showed me how many 0's to put after the 5 on the slip."

Davis to Pick Crime Probers

Representative James C. Davis (D., Ga.) yesterday said one of the first moves of his District crime investigating staff will be to consult with the Washington Criminal Justice Association.

Davis said he expects to name the staff today. Four jobs, including chief counsel, two investigators, and a secretary, are to be filled under the $10,000 fund granted by the House for the investigation.

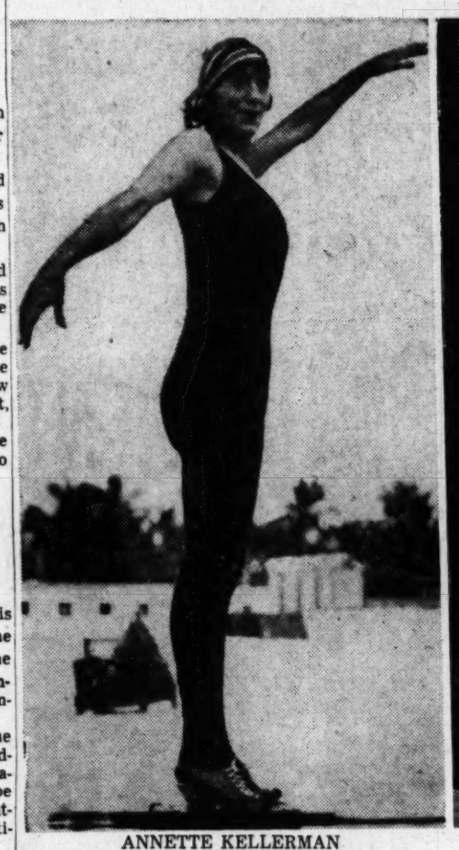
Full cooperation of the Criminal Justice Association has been offered to the investigating subcommittee, Davis said.

A letter to Davis from Hector M. Aring, president of the Criminal Justice Association, pointed out that the association was organized in 1936 upon recommendation of the House District Committee after a subcommittee had then investigated crime conditions in the District.

Aring explained that the association's executive committee had instructed its managing director, Edward J. Flynn, to give full cooperation to the Davis crime investigation.

Davis said the subcommittee staff will then turn to the records of the police department and of the courts. He said a detailed follow-through study of criminal cases, in each stage of the law enforcement process, is planned.

Miss Kellerman Is 'Shocked'



ANNETTE KELLERMAN
On the beach in 1936—Nobody looked

LINDA LOMBARD
Everybody looked at Linda last year

Hollywood, Oct. 25 (U.P.)—Annette Kellerman, who scandalized the world when she was the first girl to wear a one-piece bathing suit, said today women ought to go back to it. Today's French bathing suits, she thinks, are shocking.

Miss Kellerman, the Esther Williams of the 1900s, got herself arrested in Boston 45 years ago when she appeared minus bathing bloomers, blouse and stockings. She thinks her emancipation went far enough.

"French bathing suits slit up the sides! It's ugly when women show their thighs," said Miss Kellerman, who still has her shapely figure, black hair and sparkling eyes.

"And you know what promotes the sale of the things? Falsies. I'm horrified at the number of falsies sold so girls can wear those suits.

"In my day," she added, "girls weren't that underdeveloped."

"Bathing suits were lovely until last year when they brought out those diapers. They're vulgar and suggestive. Heavens! What will they be wearing in 1952?"

Third Man Accused in Grill Arson

A third man was charged with arson yesterday in investigation of a $17,000 blaze that raged last July 5 through Tex's Grill, 1361 H st. ne.

He is Charles Melvin Thorne, 24, of 1612 U st. se., driver for a construction firm, who earlier in the investigation had been booked as a material witness.

Sergt. Earl J. Atzrott, of the Fire Marshal's office, and police, said Thorne made a complete written statement admitting participation in setting the fire. He was arraigned yesterday before Judge Thomas D. Quinn in Municipal Court on the arson charge, and released on $1000 bond.

Previously, Richard R. (Tex) Baker, owner of the grill, and William P. Corley, 517 K st. ne., who had been night manager in the place, were charged with arson.

Corley is free on bond, and Baker in jail. They are slated for trial November 23.

Armed Forces Aid Baby Facing Death

Seven-months-old Susan Pershall spent the day in Washigton yesterday, but she was in an awful hurry to leave.

It's not that Susan didn't like Washington. She just didn't have much time. Susan had to get to Chicago to see her father and mother's family. Doctors weren't too sure she could make it.

Susan has amyotonia congenita, which means most of her muscles don't work. On top of that she's developed pneumonia in the past week. She has to be fed by tube and the mucous her pneumonia stores up has to be sucked out by syringe.

At Camp Lejeune, where her father, Corpl. Bobby Dean Pershall, was stationed until this week, doctors didn't hold out much hope for the child.

Corpl. Pershall and his wife, Mrs. Emily Pershall, wanted Susan to spend whatever time remained at Mrs. Pershall's home just south of Chicago, so the corporal asked for a transfer to Great Lakes Naval Training Station near there.

Traveling under orders, Corpl. Pershall started for Chicago by train Monday. Doctors warned that Susan couldn't stand much traveling, so Mrs. Pershall and the baby went by air.

They got into Washington yesterday morning on a Capital Airliner, Susan stretched out on her little mattress. Since there was no Capital plane for Chicago until the evening, Susan spent the day at National Airport, being fed a special formula every three hours.

Dr. Ludwig G. Lederer, Capital Airlines physician, who attended the child, said Susan had a pretty good chance to survive the flight, considering. How long after she got there Dr. Lederer couldn't tell.

Capital Airlines arranged for special oxygen equipment because the weather was bad and the plane might have to fly high and the regular oxygen equipment might not be adequate.

At the Chicago airport, the Navy had an ambulance, oxygen, a doctor and a Marine sergeant standing by.

Topsy-Turvy

Marauders Nearly Wreck Novelty Store

Burglars—apparently about four youthful ones—nearly wrecked the store of the Garrison Toy & Novelty Co., 1215 E st. nw. early yesterday. After viewing the havoc in the place, police estimated that the marauders must have remained for several hours.

When Andrew H. Tucker, manager, opened the store at 8 a. m., he found the place—all four floors—in a shambles.

Footballs and baseballs had been unwrapped and tossed around, as though boys were staging passing and kicking practice. Some dangerously sharp hunting arrows had been shot into the woodwork. On the roof of an adjoining restaurant, nine arrows and two bows were found.

Three flashlights had been burned out. Cap pistols had been fired extensively.

Tucker said the stock of the store was so scrambled that a complete inventory will be necessary to determine what was taken. He said, however, that 13 children's watches and five pen and pencil sets were missing.

Police began looking for a group of boys who must have been missing from their homes for a large part of Monday night.

Street Named for Prince

Orsett, England, Oct. 25 (U.P.)—Princess Elizabeth today named a tree-lined Orsett thoroughfare Prince Charles Avenue after her 11-month-old son. The baby already has a school named for him.

At Visible Lunch

Law Looks, Seizes and Conquers

The P. O. Visible Lunch, at 729 N. Capitol st., is entirely too visible, and as a result, J. D. Waites, 28, of Knoxville, Tenn., was in jail yesterday charged with larceny and housebreaking.

Police said a passerby saw a man inside the Visible Lunch banging at the bottom of a safe with a hammer and chisel. He called police, who dispatched Pvts. A. F. Mode and Thomas H. Carpenter in a scout car.

On their arrival, the visible intruder tried to become invisible by ascending to the roof through a skylight and then entering an adjoining house. Privates Mode and Carpenter found him there. As they did, they said, his pants fell down from the weight of $8.10 in small coins which they said he had taken from a sales tax container in the restaurant.

Outside the place, the officers said, they found 25 cartons of cigarettes, which had been thrown through a window before they arrived. When the man identified himself as Waites, he told officers he arrived in the city Monday and had no address here.

Girl's Charges Fail to Hold Up

The United States Attorney's office declined yesterday to prosecute Police Pvt. Leslie K. Smoak, 36, on a simple assault charge filed after an 11-year-old girl complained to police.

Prosecutor J. Warren Wilson said after a conference with the girl, witnesses and police officials that the evidence was "insufficient and too contradictory" to sustain any prosecution.

The girl last week accused Smoak of making improper advances after he gave her a lift in his automobile. She broke her arm in leaping from his automobile.

H. Clifford Allder, Smoak's attorney, said the girl had become alarmed because her mother had warned her not to ride with strangers, and that Smoak had done nothing improper.

Smoak, who had been suspended from duty after the assault charge was placed, was restored to his post after Wilson's action yesterday.

Alto Singers Sought By Opera Guild Here

Alto singers are needed by the choral group of the Opera Guild of Washington, Guild President Dorothy Remington announced yesterday.

Candidates will be auditioned after the group's regular rehearsal at 7:30 p. m., Saturday, in the United Nations Club, 1701 19th st. nw.

After the auditions, the group has scheduled an informal Halloween party.

Police Told to Expect 3 Nights of Halloween Pranks

Metropolitan Police began yesterday to prepare for the annual celebration of Halloween here over the coming weekend with orders to all commanding officers outlining special precautions.

The mischievous holiday actually falls on Monday night, but Inspector Floyd Truscott, assistant superintendent, wrote that "it is anticipated that since it falls on Monday, children will be on the streets in full force on the preceding Friday and Saturday nights as well as on Monday."

In spector Truscott directed all commanding officers to have their school coordinators make every effort to see that Parent-Teacher Associations, Boys Clubs, and other groups stage special community parties to attract the children away from promiscuous street wandering and mischief.

In a separate order, he directed all possible steps be taken to prevent a repetition of the 53 false fire alarms turned in here last year during a three-day Halloween observance. This order listed the time and locations of the alarms and instructed that a special watch be maintained on alarm boxes at those locations, as well as others.

"It is the earnest desire of the department to curb the Halloween practice of sounding false fire alarms and thus prevent a possible serious accident to both Fire Department personnel and the general public," he wrote.

Sigma Nu Alumni Club To Hear Frank Yates

Frank L. Yates, assistant comptroller general, will address a luncheon meeting at 12:15 p. m. today of the Sigma Nu Alumni Club of Washington. The meeting will be at O'Donnell's Sea Food Grill, 12th and E sts. nw.

Arlington Candidates Debate Before Civic Organization

Basil M. DeLashmutt, Arlington County Board chairman, last night denied charges by his opponent, Robert W. Cox, nonpartisan, that "our tax rate would not be where it is now if the chairman of the County Board had done his official duty."

In a debate before the Jefferson Civic League at the Jefferson firehouse, Cox charged that the county board "can and should have taken action" on tax inequities "years ago." He recommended establishment of a board of equalization.

DeLashmutt, replied that a 40-cent increase in the county's present tax rate was avoided this year when the county board adopted a business and professional tax, plus a county auto license tag tax.

Stating that the "real estate tax is getting to be a serious problem," DeLashmutt said the yield from the new taxes is "approximately 40 cents on your tax rate."

DeLashmutt added that "the county board has nothing to do with assessments on your property, since assessors are appointed by Circuit Court." He said, however, that the county board is having assessments made by tax experts from Richmond "which we will pass on to the Circuit Court judge for his information."

Cox also asserted that the county board has cost its citizens thousands of dollars by failing to buy park and playground land when it was cheap.

DeLashmutt prefaced his reply with the statement that "maybe we have been a little slow to purchase the land."

"However a bond issue (for the playground sites) was approved in 1943 during the war, when we couldn't get personnel to plan county operations promptly," he added.

Jacob Bechtel, independent board candidate, told the 20 persons at the debate—"a planned economy for Arlington, that's my platform."

He charged that "Arlington hasn't been spending wisely—you're getting plenty of money in taxes but you go on borrowing and borrowing."

I. Lee Potter, Republican candidate for the House of Delegates, stated: "I propose to vote no on the proposed poll tax amendment to the Virginia constitution." Potter said the amendment is "so ambiguous in so many respects that it's almost impossible to tell whether it will be an improvement."

George Damm, incumbent Democratic delegate, said that mental hospitals "are just as big a responsibility as the schools" in Virginia today. "They don't have the lobbies the schools have or even that of the tubercular hospitals," he said. He urged continued improvements in mental institutions.

J. Maynard Magruder, incumbent Democrat in the House of Delegates, urged that counties which have already appropriated large sums for improvement of their school should not be neglected when State grants are passed out to localities.

Bishop Reports

Japan Called Evangelist's Best Field

Japan presents the greatest field of opportunity for the Christian evangelist in the world today, the Right Rev. John B. Bently, vice president of the National Council of the Protestant Episcopal Church, declared last night.

Bishop Bentley spoke at the opening session of a three-day missionary institute at First Congregational Church, 10th and G sts. nw., sponsored by the Washington Council of Church Women.

He said young people in Japan are looking for a new faith that will give them something to hope for in the future. They are eager, he said, to hear and learn Christianity.

The Episcopal bishop, who toured the Far East for four months last summer, expressed the belief that Japan is a strategic field for Christian missionary work in the Far East and is the area from which future missionaries may go to work on the whole continent of Asia.

If Japan becomes a Christian nation, he said, democratic ideals and institutions will take hold.

Conversion of Japan, Bishop Bentley declared, is a task for the Japanese Christian Church, in spite of the fact that today less than 1 percent of the population of the islands is Christian.

He urged American churches to aid in this work by helping to support theological schools in Japan, and providing for graduate theological study for Japanese ministers in the United States.

The doctrines and practices of inhabitants of an unknown Jewish sect of the first century B. C. offer an "interesting comparison" to many present-day customs, a Yale University Biblical scholar said last night.

Dr. Millar Burrows told his audience at the Coolidge auditorium of the Library of Congress that recently discovered Hebrew manuscripts show there were in the community laymen with "priestly guides" who conformed to a strict code of moral behavior.

A description of life in the still unidentified sect, dated around 75 B. C., is contained in one of three 2000-year-old scrolls now on display at the library.

Acclaimed by experts as the greatest single manuscript discovery of modern times, the three scrolls were found in a cave south of Jericho in 1947.

Besides the compendium on practices of the Jewish sect, the exhibition includes a copy of the Book of Isaiah in the text believed familiar to Christ and part of a commentary on two chapters of Habakkuk, also attributed to the first century B. C.

Dr. Burrows said it is believed the manuscripts belonged to a library in the mysterious Jewish community before being hidden and subsequently found by two Bedouin shepherds.

Dr. Burrows, professor of Biblical theology at Yale University Divinity School, appeared under joint sponsorship of the Library and the Washington Society of the Archaeological Institute of America.

Regional Jail For Northern Va. Proposed

A bill to provide a regional jail for northern Virginia will be introduced at the 1950 session of the Legislature Guy Ancell, Alexandria city manager, said last night.

Ancell told City Council the State Prison Board will ask for four regional jails in the State. One in northern Virginia, Ancell said, would eliminate overcrowding at the Alexandria jail, where more than 100 prisoners have been freed since April before their time was up.

Ancell's statement followed a motion by Councilman Marshall Beverley asking that the committee be named to investigate "very bad conditions at the Alexandria jail."

Councilman Roy Bragg said nothing can be done about it at present. Planned expansion of the jail was eliminated recently for lack of funds, he declared.

A regional jail would permit the Alexandria jail to be used as a temporary lockup, said Ancell. City prisoners could be boarded at the regional jail. Beverley's motion was tabled.

Mayor Franklin P. Backus appointed the following to serve on a committee to study possibility of annexing adjacent areas: Ancell, City Attorney V. Floyd Williams, Edward J. Kelly, City Planning Commission; Mrs. Irene Pancoast, Business and Professional Women's Club; Edward Holland, Chamber of Commerce; Councilman Albert Smoot, who will be chairman, and City Engineer Luckett Watkins.

Old-Timers Cool to Gold Strike

Anchorage, Alaska, Oct. 25 (AP). Some Anchorage people have set out for the Fort Yukon area, but the old-time gold hunters here are viewing the gold discovery reports coolly.

Experienced prospectors express the belief that most of the promising claims already have been staked out in the area where a fishwheel came up with nuggets frozen to the hub. Some say the country there is too flat for a good strike and the report that bedrock is 200 feet or more down is a discouraging sign.

The Anchorage Times said there was no basis for reports that frenzied gold seekers were chartering taxicabs to rush to Fairbanks, the jumping-off spot for the flights to the Fishwheel area. The reports were that the taxi fare had been boosted above $400. The newspaper noted that the Anchorage-Fairbanks train fare by streamliner was only about $25 and an airplane flight was only about $35.

Patsy Brand, wife of well-known Chevy Chase golfer, finds

"Even a Golf Widow has a wonderful time at the New Greenbrier"

GOLFING, CANASTA, DANCING, and congenial people give the Harrison Brands of Washington, D.C., a weekend to remember. "From the minute we had good-morning coffee in the lobby on Friday," Patsy says, "I felt as glamorous as Scarlett O'Hara!"

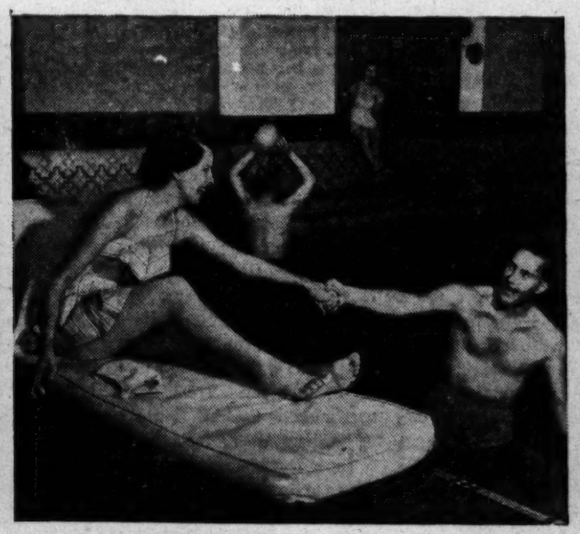
"THE VERY FIRST DAY, I met the most interesting writer." Patsy chats with Keith Monroe, doing Greenbrier story for national magazine, as Harrison tees off with region's top players. "That's when I found out 13 Presidents visited here."

"WHEN I WENT to have a massage, I met the nicest girl." Patsy follows Mrs. Thomas Shepard of Cincinnati through fascinating beauty routine of Greenbrier's Bath Dept.

"BEFORE DINNER we taught Keith Monroe Canasta." Relaxing in gay Trellis card room, Patsy waits for Harrison. "Did Dorothy Draper use rhododendrons in here because they're West Virginia's state flower?" she asks.

"HARRISON PULLED on a pair of boots—rode a horse named Perky." No horsewoman, Patsy and friends tour fabulous hotel, see dozens of rooms, no two alike. "We even saw the suite where famous visitors stay."

BEAUTIFUL in swirling taffeta, Patsy smiles at Shepards in pink and crystal ballroom. "It was fun dressing for dinner on Saturday. The orchestra played 'Some Enchanted Evening,' our favorite song."



"I REALLY DO LOVE swimming," Patsy insists when teased about sports she does not do. Greenbrier's mosaic pool attracts Brands and Shepards for Sunday morning plunge. "Brrrr," says Patsy, until Harrison tells her flowing spring water is heated for year-round swimming.

"MAYBE THE SHEPARDS can come back the same weekend," Patsy suggests when Harrison accepts Golf Pro Nixon's return-match invitation. "For a dance with you—and wonderful food like this—I'll come whenever you say," Tuck Shepard says with elaborate gallantry.

FOR more than a century White Sulphur Springs has attracted couples like the Washington Brands who expect vacations to mean fun, real adventure and interesting new friends. At The Greenbrier they find that holiday dreams come true. Mansion grace, southern hospitality, plus wonderful things to do. The new Greenbrier is out of this world in everything but price. Rates per person, for double room with private bath, average $19-$20 per day—some as low as $16—which includes breakfast, lunch, tea and dinner. Send for free color photograph booklet.

National Symphony

The National Symphony Orchestra, one of Washington's great and regrettably rare cultural institutions, will embark upon its nineteenth season at Constitution Hall this evening. A great many of the community's music lovers will miss Hans Kindler, who founded the orchestra in 1931. On the podium in his place, however, there will be Howard Mitchell, one of the youngest conductors of a major orchestra in the country, who has already won the affection of Washington concertgoers. The 20 Wednesday night and six Sunday afternoon concerts scheduled by the National Symphony will present a brilliant array of soloists and guest conductors.

Washington is at present without a legitimate theater, without a permanent opera company. Happily, the National Symphony Orchestra seems established on a secure and enduring basis. The sustaining fund necessary to carry it through the current season was provided by more than 9000 individual contributors last spring. The balance of its budget must come through the sale of tickets. Those who support the orchestra through attendance at its concerts will be rewarded by music of the highest quality and by participation in the maintenance of an invaluable cultural enterprise.

Fertile Crescent

For years back the principal crop in the crescent between the Euphrates and the Tigris has been political intrigue. Last August 14 this led to the assassination of a Syrian army colonel, Husni Zaim, who himself had assumed the presidency as the result of a coup d'etat. Whence the inspiration of the plot still seems to be a mystery, though the French have hinted darkly at Iraqi inspiration. At any rate Syria seems now to be moving into the Iraqi camp, nominally in the form of a union, actually in that of a military alliance. Lebanon is disturbed; the project poses a threat to her Christian minority. So is Israel, for any Syro-Iraqi union would bring the only holdout among the armistice signers, viz, Iraq, up to her frontier, and she would have to redivert her manpower and resources to war preparations. Transjordan is likewise irked; King Abdullah always has had aspirations to lead a Greater Syria, with the kindred Hashemite houses of Iraq and Transjordan absorbing the republican Syrians. Nor is the rest of the jealousy-ridden Arab world at all pleased with what appears to be hatching in Damascus.

The repercussions of what amounts to a conspiracy are now being felt in world capitals. The French see the hand of the British Colonial Office in the design, and are just as much agitated as the Middle Eastern capitals. Certainly Britain has an influence in Iraq which is pretty strong, though not as sphere-like as its influence in Transjordan. However, the only overt act of Britain's men on the spot is word to King Abdullah to keep hands off. The State Department, where all manner of representations seem to have been made of late by Lebanese, Israelis, Turks and French, is clearly trying to nip the new maneuver in the bud. Well it might, for the development may dash the hope of a new stability in the Middle East. The Arab nations are too weak either to make war or to make peace with Israel. But they can make trouble, and trouble-making, alas, is their way of damping down domestic discontent. If they could be joined in a regional group with Israel and Turkey, and dedicated to the common development of their river systems, they would be justifying their statehood, not to say their responsibilities to their downtrodden peoples.

Dealing With Robeson

A story has come to us illustrating a sensible way of dealing with Paul Robeson. A group of students constituting "The Forum Board" at Oberlin College, hearing that Mr. Robeson was coming to Cleveland, invited him to appear at Oberlin on October 6. Mr. Robeson and the "Cleveland Committee to Welcome Paul Robeson" accepted the invitation. Thereupon the forum board asked President William E. Stevenson of Oberlin to let them use Finney Chapel, the largest hall at the college, for the occasion. President Stevenson replied: "Oberlin College has traditionally supported the cause of free speech and public discussion of controversial issues . . . Therefore Oberlin College will grant to the forum board a platform on which Mr. Robeson can be heard on a forum basis upon the express condition that an equal opportunity be given on the same program for a person or persons who may hold divergent views."

But this, apparently, was not at all what Mr. Robeson and his sponsors wanted. They declined the invitation. "Injecting into the Oberlin invitation the appearance of controversy," said the Cleveland committee, "is not connected with affirming and reaffirming the rights of an artist to be heard and the need of all citizens to come together to guarantee full democracy. That right and that need are not subject to debate." No comment seems necessary.

Atomic Rivalry

The atomic scientists, who warned the country three years ago that it could not achieve security through secrecy about atomic energy, are now warning that security through supremacy is equally an illusion. Their consensus, as expressed in the latest issue of their Bulletin, is that the Soviet Union will before long be on a substantial parity with the United States in the production of atomic weapons.

Dr. Harold C. Urey puts it this way: "I should say about two years could and probably will see the lead of the United States effectively wiped out." A similar opinion is expressed in a separate statement by Dr. Frederick Seitz: "The greatest danger we face at present is that the Russians will now surpass us in bomb production and in other phases of the development of atomic energy. I believe that this is not a minor probability but is actually a strong possibility."

The scientists give two reasons for their pessimism. One is that the cult of secrecy hamstrings progress. "I think it is of the utmost importance that we realize now," says Dr. Urey, "that the atomic energy program in the United States is inefficient at present because it is frustrated by a mistaken desire on the part of Congress and the public to protect us against the loss of 'The Secret.' This exceedingly dangerous situation can only be remedied if we start to take a realistic point of view instead of trying to find protection behind a scientific Maginot Line." Excessive concealment and overly rigid personnel clearance policies have, he thinks, kept many able scientists out of the atomic energy program.

The other reason for anxiety is that totalitarian Russia may devote a far greater proportion of her resources and energies to atomic energy development than the United States. As stated by Dr. Seitz, "It must be remembered that we do not devote all of our industrial outlay to the production of the bomb, but probably only of the order of 1 percent. Even if the Russian industrial outlay is only 10 percent of ours, which is probably a large underestimation, Russia can match our present effort by devoting a tenth of it to the bomb."

There can be but extremely dubious security at best in an atomic arms race, even if this country succeeds in maintaining supremacy by liberating the atomic scientists and by devoting ever-increasing appropriations to their work. For, even if more bombs and bigger bombs are produced here, the Russians will in time have a sufficient stockpile of their own, perhaps inferior, weapons to inflict frightful devastation on American industrial centers. It may be that fear of retaliation will forestall atomic warfare as it forestalled gas warfare. But this seems a great deal less likely in respect of a weapon to the production of which a nation may have devoted a major portion of its energies and with which it may be tempted to try a quick knockout blow.

There can be no real security, then, save through effective international control of atomic energy. President Truman expressed his own sense of urgency on this score in his appeal to the Russians for fresh consideration of the American control proposal at the United Nations cornerstone-laying ceremonies on Monday in New York. But every rational approach to control should be resolutely explored. Even a measure of control that falls short of the ideal may serve to relieve a mounting tension that can end only in general annihilation.

Another Union Yields

Like a good many other labor union leaders who refused at first to take the non-Communist oath, officials of the United Electrical Workers, a so-called left-wing CIO affiliate, have decided to comply with the oath requirement of the Taft-Hartley Act. They have discovered that the cost of holding out is much too high, since it disqualifies their union for participation in NLRB elections. The result is a decline in membership that has overcome resistance to the oath requirement.

The Washington Post has always opposed the non-Communist oath provision of the Taft-Hartley Act on the ground that it is an ineffective method of weakening the influence of Communist elements in labor unions. The point is underlined by the present case. The UEW's compliance merely signifies that the officials taking the oath are not members of the Communist Party. It is no guarantee that the oath-takers are not advocates of communism. Nor does it indicate any change of attitude on the part of rank and file union members.

A union official who is a member of the Communist Party can fulfill the requirements of the law by simply resigning from the party without repudiating its objectives. As we pointed out recently in discussing a case of this kind, the "only possible use of the anti-Communist oath is for perjury prosecutions in the event that signers are found to be Communists." Instead of helping to purge unions of Communist influences, the oath requirement provides a protective covering behind which Communist members of labor unions can continue to carry on their subversive activities and at the same time enjoy the privileges of recognition by the NLRB.

Dream Or Nightmare

President Eisenhower of Columbia University has suggested a practical approach to the greatest domestic problem of our time. That problem, as General Eisenhower defines it, is how to chart a dividing line between individual and governmental responsibility that will at once maintain our freedom and permit the "fullest exploitation of American resources for the good of all." He recognizes that the line between Government functions and individual rights must fluctuate in accord with the requirements of each age. Today Government may be used as our servant and law as an instrument to accomplish many things formerly left to the individual. Yet the limit to governmental activity must be drawn somewhere if individual freedom is to be maintained, and General Eisenhower suggests "the convocation of leaders in every field with the faculties of some of our great universities" in an effort to chart the right course.

Such a study would, of course, be only a guide to thinking. Its value would depend, as General Eisenhower noted, upon the success of its sponsors in rescuing this great issue from the domain of prejudice, emotion, partisan politics and selfish interests. It seems highly improbable that any large number of eminent political analysts and elder statesmen would agree on the course to be taken. But even a debate of the pros and cons on a nonpolitical level would be enlightening and helpful.

General Eisenhower has well stated the dilemma that confronts us. "Certainly," he told the New York Herald Tribune forum, "the American dream demands that we continue the search for betterment in the cultural and material standards of our people, using, where absolutely necessary, specific powers of law and government." Yet he fears that the so-called American dream may become a nightmare unless the people understand that government must not become the master—that it must operate with its powers sharply defined and limited by the governed. Freedom may be lost, he fears, unless we give play to the qualities of initiative, courage and inventiveness that have given our system its strength. How far may regimentation in the interests of the general welfare go without impairing individual responsibility and drying up the well springs of a free society?

It would be naive to assume that any group of intellectuals or elder statesmen could return a conclusive answer. But the problem is of such fundamental importance that we should like to see it tossed into the lap of the ablest committee that can be assembled, including General Eisenhower himself.

Arms And The Money

Representative Carl Vinson, replying to our October 22 editorial, "After the Blow-Up," emphasizes that he does not believe the armed services should determine their own budget. This reassurance from the chairman of the House Armed Services Committee is indeed welcome. The impression that he felt otherwise arose from his criticism in the House hearings of the manner in which the present budget was arrived at, and from the somewhat confusing nature of his exchange with General Marshall.

What Mr. Vinson does object to is the arbitrary imposition of a budget ceiling by the President before actual needs have been studied. Under the National Security Act, he points out, the National Security Council is charged with the first step of analyzing the international position of the United States and its military prospectus. In theory this analysis then goes to the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who prepare a strategic plan which in turn is translated into actual cost requirements by the individual departments. This becomes the base for budgetary planning. The "ideal" budget, Mr. Vinson writes, is > successively pared down to the minimum point consistent with national security, this paring process involving the participation of all of the services, the Secretary of Defense, and analysis and study by the Bureau of the Budget. The result of this process is to insure that at all stages in the development of the military budget, those dealing with the problem are constantly aware of the compromises being made with the national security in the interest of a healthy national economy.

This is a reasonable statement to which we subscribe. There is little point in going through the motions of a trial if the jury has announced its verdict beforehand. This does not mean that the floodgates must be opened to all military demands, for the military can always contrive an impressive case. The President and his advisers must remain the arbiters of the budget to be asked, and the job is one of integrating military needs with the needs of the remainder of the economy. A calculated risk of this sort must be based, however, on knowledge of all the available facts.

To a considerable degree the difficulty seems to lie with the National Security Council. Mr. Vinson states flatly that the request of the Secretary of Defense for budgetary guidance was not answered by the NSC. Yet the Security Council is composed of the President himself, the Vice President, the Secretaries of State and Defense, the now nonexistent chairman of the National Security Resources Board and others whom the President may designate. Until Mr. Truman prods the National Security Council into a definition of objectives and commitments in relation to the economic and military factors governing security, there can be no intelligent military budget—or any realistic strategy either.

Virginia Poll Tax

Thank you for the informative article in your October 23 issue on the Virginia poll tax. Your headline on Page 17, "Poll Tax Substitute, Top Virginia Issue," is quite accurate, while your Page 1 headline, "Poll Tax Death Overshadows Office Races," seems to imply that the issue is already settled, that the poll tax is doomed.

I hope your implication is wrong. Please don't misunderstand me, I do not favor a poll tax in Virginia or anywhere. But, rather than see the citizens of Virginia tricked into agreeing to "the trappings of the Campbell amendments," I would prefer to see the present poll tax retained.

For the proposed change might easily reduce the number of voters even more than a poll tax has done. As you have pointed out, the new law calls for an annual registration and, worse than that, it must be 120 days before election day. It has been difficult enough to get the people to register once, 30 days before election day. Now it is proposed that they register annually, four months before the election. How much more difficult it would be to get the people to register each year, months before candidates are known or issues have become crystallized!

Even if this difficult problem is overcome, the citizen may find it impossible to register. For the proposed amendments provide that the voter must "meet such tests as to literacy and such further requirements as the General Assembly may prescribe." Who knows what those words such further requirements mean? They must mean something, or they would not have been written into the proposed law. I agree with the Richmond News Leader, which said in its editorial columns last week: "That language has a 'lean and hungry' look, and we trust it not."

Let's hope that the Virginia electorate will be wise enough to vote "NO" on November 8.

'Farm Pretense'

Recently, while comfortably enjoying a whodunit radio piece, I was brought back to reality by friend wife's query, "What's about this farm subsidy program and its little pal, 'parity'?" Still wanting to hear who had murdered the guy, I ducked the question by suggesting, "Just look at the October 20 Washington Post and give their editorial, "Farm Pretense," a once-over.

As custodian of the house money my wife is more than fed up with the high cost of farm fodder required to feed our modest menage, so she sailed into the item pronto. After reading it, she exclaimed spontaneously, "That's what I like about Washington Post writers. They make things clear and they don't mince words!" Quite an accolade, I thought. She epitomized (it seems to me) the major goals of true editorializing. Any lad or lassie who can achieve them is a real newspaperman.

Truman's Responsibility

Now that the Nation is experiencing creeping economic paralysis, as a consequence of strikes in the vital coal, steel and aluminum industries, it is about time the President got down out of his ivory tower and invoked the Taft-Hartley law in the interests of the Nation as a whole, instead of floating around in the stratosphere from which he gets telegraphic reports of the demands of labor but fails to see the real needs of the American people.

Mr. Truman should never forget that he was elected by all of the people, and that he is subservient to their interests. It is time that he stopped horse trading more and more power to labor leaders in return for votes, before he trades us right into some new kind of collectivism. CALVIN BROWN.
Scarsdale, N. Y.

Transit Radio

I know that I speak for many people when I say that the radios on the Capital Transit Co. streetcars and buses are sincerely appreciated.

My friends and I ride the streetcars on the average of six times daily, and when we are able to choose, we always ride the ones equipped with radios. I believe that such excellently chosen musical programs put the majority of our jostled commuters in a much better mood, which in itself is more than enough to compensate for the annoyance of those who don't enjoy good music. J. D. JOHNSON.

Radio advertising on street cars and buses, brings up a very serious question. The Public Utilities Commission does not have the right to compel passengers to hear radio advertising.

Russia's Navy

Twice within one week, the Alsops have referred to the Soviet Union as a "nonnaval power." (October 14 and 19.)

Is this accurate journalism? If so, what do they deem to be the standard requisites to qualify as a naval power?
JOHN E. CURRY,
Colonel, USMC.
Washington.

Pearson's Error

It is important, in view of several of Drew Pearson's latest vitriolic blasts against the Navy, to point out to your readers one example—and there are many others — of how completely biased Pearson can be when writing about the Navy.

I quote from Pearson's "Washington Merry-Go-Round" of June 12, 1942: "The Battle of Midway, and, in fact, all major United States victories so far, have been won primarily by the Army Air Corps. The Navy has been in command, issued the communiques, and received most of the credit. But at Midway and the Coral Sea, land-based Army airplanes turned the tide of victory."

Nothing could have been further from the truth. The Pacific Fleet communiques issued after the battle were strikingly accurate, and gave credit where it was due—to Navy and Marine Corps dive bombers and torpedo planes. This has since been conclusively proved by Japanese naval records and interrogations of Japanese naval officers who were present at Midway. J. Q. EDWARDS.
Washington.

'Fetish Of Old Age'

I am one of the victims of the "fetish of old age" mentioned in your front page article of October 20. Last June 1 passed the fatal deadline, 65, and I was retired from a great national organization.

I read somewhere years ago that certain tribes solved the problems of old age by drowning the old women who were considered useless and a liability since they still had to be fed. It seems to me that the United States is varying that procedure by refusing to allow people past 65 the right to earn a living. Science boasts that it has increased longevity by many years; but I can see no advantage in that if we are to be tucked away on a shelf, to become a burden to the Government or to our children who are struggling to raise families in these days of financial difficulties. G. P. V.
Washington.

The War No One Wins

Nothing could be more dangerous to American security and the peace of the world than plans for winning the next war. The important thing about the next war, if it comes, will not be how to win it, but much more to the point, how not to lose it.

Surely it should be clear to all that in a war employing atomic and bacteriological weapons for general devastation on both sides, there will not be victor and vanquished, but simply two losers. As long, therefore, as both sides hold the means to spread such destruction, the inevitability of reprisal will be a powerful deterrent. Accordingly, neither we nor the Russians can possibly hope to gain anything by the use of these formidable weapons, so long as the other side is ready and able to reply in kind.

It is surprising to see that, so far as I know, little mention has been made of the tremendous power of the atomic bomb as a purely defensive weapon. What the atomic bomb does is to make intercontinental invasion virtually impossible.

The underwater explosion at Bikini showed clearly the deadly effect of contamination of ships by radioactivity. Obviously, the naval task force is accordingly obsolete, and the concentration of ships on a scale like that used off Normandy in June, 1944, unthinkable. Under the circumstances it would be folly for the Russians to send an invasion fleet against the United States, and, of course, equal folly for us to send an invasion fleet against Russia.

It follows, then, that attempts to "win" the next war, if made by either side, can lead only to disaster. Attempts not to lose, on the other hand, are well worth while, and may succeed in preventing the war before it even starts, or at least in keeping it from taking a fatal turn into the indiscriminate use of weapons of mass destruction.

We need to recast our military thinking along realistic lines. The Army must give up the absurd dream of attempting to invade the land mass of Asia, where Hitler under far more favorable circumstances failed. The Navy must recognize that the task force is obsolete, in the form in which it was so effective in the last war, and should turn its attention exclusively to the important and vital task of anti-submarine work with destroyers, light cruisers and fast escort carriers. The Air Force is correct in developing long-range bombers for the present, since nothing better is available, but needs to work more closely with the Army and Navy in developing guided missiles as the reprisal weapons of the future.

Since there is obviously never going to be any love or trust between the United States and Russia under their present systems of government, it becomes obvious that the best hope of enduring peace lies in convincing both sides that neither can hope to win. This is the easier to do, since it has the merit of being entirely true.

Reprimand On Divorce

By Malvina Lindsay

Placing The Guilt

MANY AMERICANS are asking "What's the matter with staid old England?" Princess Elizabeth's recent lecture to British mothers on divorce and lax moral standards has made them wonder—coming as it did at a time when more austerity of living, which hits especially hard on women, had been decreed. And when they hear that the British ratio of divorce to marriage is about one to eight, as compared to one to four in this country, they wonder still more at "all the fuss."

American ears have become hardened to warnings from pulpit, lecture platform and elsewhere about their own social behavior. They never pay much attention to exhortation anyway. But they are always a little surprised to hear that the conventional British are not toeing the mark.

Some of the moral rectitude of Queen Victoria or Dowager Queen Mary may have cropped out in Princess Elizabeth's unprecedented rebuke. Or more likely it voiced official concern over the nation's social structure. If the latter is true, the British at least have the assurance their problem is world-wide. Modern Elijahs everywhere are warning mankind about its social ways. And recently the Soviet Union took yet another step to tighten its divorce laws.

IT WILL take more than public scoldings in England and elsewhere to stop the social upheaval growing out of two world wars and widespread social revolution. It is surprising that in Britain family breakdown has not been greater. Few countries, if any, had greater strains on marriage and family life during the last war. Many of these remain today, and the new austerity, announced day before yesterday on "black Monday," will not help to make family life smoother.

Women have been blamed for much of the divorce and social instability in Britain. Yet for 10 years they have had a life of strain, sacrifice, fatigue. Their continuing hard existence is repeatedly referred to by British leaders visiting this country. Not that this is put forward as an alibi for divorce or loose morals. But anyone knows that the wife, who so largely makes the social climate of the home, cannot bring much to that job if she is the prisoner of the kitchen and the marketing queue, continually worn down by primitive household drudgery, shoddy clothes and austere food rations.

"It's harder to win an economic Dunkirk than a military one," recently remarked a British visitor, Miss Violet Markham, former Liberal Party leader and one of the founders of the National Institute of Household Workers. This institute, by giving domestic workers more skill and status, hopes to recruit more young women in this field. Thus one of the big burdens of the British housewife, her almost complete lack of domestic help, might be lightened.

BRITAIN also is reaping socially the result of the great demands made on women during the war. Mothers absent from their homes in factory or defense work could not supervise their adolescent daughters. And the island was crowded with servicemen from all parts of the world, including American GIs with pockets full of dollars. Hasty marriages or lowered moral standards often resulted. Also the absence of many British husbands for as long as six years made family adjustments more difficult after the war. Housing shortages, life with in-laws, austerity of living, complicated matters.

British divorce, like that in many other countries, also reflects new rights and freedom of women. Part, at least, of its divorces are based on injustices that once would have been borne silently. Prior to the divorce reform, instituted before the last war, only one ground of divorce was recognized in Britain—adultery. The resulting "black market" scandals aided in pushing a liberalized divorce bill through Parliament. But the chief rise in divorce came with the special social problems that developed out of World War II.

The young women of the Mothers Union who heard Princess Elizabeth warn against the break-up of homes, "self indulgence and falling moral standards" no doubt were impressed. But in Britain as well as here and elsewhere there is growing recognition that the prevention of divorce is primarily the building of stable marriage. That begins virtually in the cradle and extends through home and community surroundings. And it cannot be done by the lecture method.

Custody Decision

In the recent Moore custody suit the judge's decision, in my opinion, was particularly harsh and lacking in true discernment. It is not at all difficult to understand how a woman, newly divorced, trying to make a difficult emotional readjustment and earning a small salary might turn over her children to her husband and then want them back. And if her tactics in endeavoring to keep them have been less than polite that, too, is understandable, and human.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

The Shotgun Wedding

IT IS difficult to convey the momentous importance of Paul Hoffman's current mission to Europe, to promote European economic union. Perhaps the best way to put it is to say that this is the turning point of the American attempt to put the European economy on a self-supporting basis.

Making our allies self-supporting was, of course, the objective of the European Recovery Program from the beginning. In the first phase, however, Marshall aid was used simply and directly, to rebuild Europe's war-shattered productivity. This job is over. By the end of the year, European industrial and agricultural output will be on a level with output in 1938.

Precisely this dramatic achievement is what makes the second phase both possible and necessary. Mere restoration of productivity has failed to restore economic stability in France and Italy, the Low Countries and the other Marshall Plan nations. The trouble is that intra-European trade is still being strangled by exchange restrictions, import quotas, tariffs, and other devices of the period of scarcity. What must now be done is to secure the abandonment of these outworn protective devices. And this is the purpose of the European economic union which Hoffman will now attempt to promote. The ultimate aim is one great European trading area.

IT MUST be said at once that the impetus toward union has not come only from Washington. The idea has long had strong backing among Europeans. Some time ago French Finance Minister Maurice Petsche quietly inaugurated serious discussions of the project with the Italians, the Belgians, the Dutch and the ECA European staff.

The greatest practical obstacle to European union, which was the false relationship between the European currencies, has also been cleared away in recent months. The British sterling devaluation forced the Europeans to place their own currencies on a realistic basis. Thus, although theoretically controlled in varying degree, the franc, the lira and the other moneys of Europe are already, in practice, not far from being mutually convertible.

Both these hopeful developments initially generated considerable bad feeling. The British were furious that they had not been brought into the talks started by Maurice Petsche. The French and other Europeans were equally enraged by the drastic character of sterling devaluation, which Petsche went so far as to call "economic warfare." Tempers have now subsided, however. When Hoffman meets in Paris next week with Sir Stafford Cripps, Signor Pella and the other European Finance Ministers, the situation will lend itself to constructive steps.

HOFFMAN himself has rather carefully laid the groundwork for bold action, long in advance of this annual meeting of Finance Ministers. Specifically, both he and Averell Harriman have long been taking every opportunity to impress on officials of the Marshall aid countries that they would have to have "something to show for their money," in order to get next year's European recovery appropriations out of Congress.

Perhaps more important still, when the current year's Marshall aid appropriations were recently divided in Paris, Hoffman and Harriman only approved the division for the first six months. The balance of $1,800,000,000 for the second six months can still be reallocated at will. This means that noncooperators can be made to suffer greatly.

In effect, this power to change the division of the current year's Marshall aid, plus the danger in Congress, constitutes Hoffman's shotgun. The shotgun will be used, if necessary, to encourage the already affectionate Europeans to legalize their economic union. Hoffman regards the situation as sufficiently urgent to employ his shotgun if he has to.

ON THE other hand, no visionary plan, merging all the nations of Europe and the sterling area into a single economy, is under consideration. Essential first steps are all that both the more farsighted Europeans and Hoffman now want. Step number one is considered to be a substantive economic union of France, Italy and Belgium, as a minimum. To accomplish such a union, something like a central bank would be established to superintend monetary problems. Currencies would be made fairly freely convertible. Import quotas would be greatly reduced. And the participating nations would become a unified trading area.

Step number two is considered to be admission of Western Germany to the Organization for European Economic Cooperation. This recognition of the new German government's right to be heard on the problems of the European economy is in turn intended to be only preliminary. Later on, it is envisioned that Western Germany will take her place, as partner, with France, Italy and the other economically unified nations. And so, at last, the foundations of true European economic union will be laid.

No more complex, no more constructive, task has ever been undertaken by an American negotiator. Paul Hoffman should be wished Godspeed.

Sweden's Neutrality

By Marquis Childs

Uneasy Island Of Peace

STOCKHOLM, Sweden.—The water flows under the old bridges and the fishermen in flat-bottomed boats let down their round nets. If they are not paid by the management of the Grand Hotel, they should be. They strike just the right note to convince the doubting visitor that the traditional past and the dynamic present can exist securely side by side.

Childs

The backdrop is perfect—the palace, the opera, the solid pink granite building of the upper house of Parliament. That this corner of the old Europe should have gone on its normal course, complete and intact, is once again a surprise.

As the pale light fades from the gray sky, all the windows in the long facade of the palace are dark except one. In that one window is a dim glow.

The old, old King, Gustaf V, may be somewhere in that great pile, although probably he is at the summer palace at Drottningholm, where it is more peaceful. But that single light can be seen by Stockholmers as they hurry home in the evening traffic with the long lines of cars and trams backed up at the traffic lights.

The King is approaching 92. Among his people there is great concern over his health and with the extraordinary length of his life.

When he returned to Stockholm from the seaside resort where he spent the summer, he was so weak he had to be carried from the train. Alarm was felt throughout the country. But after a rest he revived and went hunting and the details of the shot he fired to bring down a bird were widely reported. The state of his health is an intense preoccupation in every newspaper office.

KING GUSTAF is deeply loved by high and low. But it seems to me to be more than that. It is as though the old King had the power to preserve the past that has been so kind to Sweden. He is linked to the miraculous good fortune which has kept off the ruin and decay that have done their work almost everywhere else in Europe.

This implies that there is doubt among the Swedes themselves. Beneath the disciplined exterior that doubt seems to me to exist. It is doubt above all of the government's neutrality policy.

Most Swedes subscribed to the strict neutrality that kept Sweden out of the Atlantic Pact while Norway and Denmark went in. A ready explanation is the habit of peace growing out of nearly 150 years without a war.

But the hard choice having been made, there is deep uncertainty that it may have been a wrong choice. After all, jet planes based in Russia are scarcely 20 minutes away. It has been definitely and positively established that the Russians have built on the shores of the Baltic, where they are in control, launching sites for missiles of the wartime V-2 type, or, it may be, even larger and more powerful projectiles.

NO ONE in high office talks about these things. Prime Minister Tage Erlander, who looks like a successful small-town American businessman, speaks confidently of the correctness of Sweden's policy.

It is the belief in the government that in the event of a war between East and West the Russians would not move out into the Baltic to occupy all the Scandinavian peninsula. The asserted reason for this belief is that the Soviet Union, with an inadequate navy, would not want to extend its lines of communication and supply. But realists are perfectly well aware that Soviet occupation of Norway, which would be a strategic necessity if it could be achieved, would mean almost automatic violation of Sweden's neutrality.

The reason frequently given here for staying out of the Atlantic Alliance is the necessity to avoid anything that might provoke the Russians to move into Finland with troops. Sweden's entry would have been the final provocation. I talked with Finnish officials who were inclined to accept, in part at least, this interpretation, believing that Finland's only window on the West might have been slammed shut if Sweden had joined up with the Western Alliance.

Even when it is successful, as it was in World War II, neutrality exacts a price. It can bring humiliation and feelings of guilt and resentment; a defensive attitude that all big powers are bad—conniving, scheming. It can mean a sense of isolation and self-questioning that sometimes sounds like the dialogue in a psychoanalyst's study.

But there is no evidence of any change in the official policy that is so firmly and persistently proclaimed. For better or for worse this nation of seven million skillful, practical, industrious managers will go down the road of neutrality.

Leak of Millions

Probe of Tax Loopholes Ineffectual

By Robert S. Allen

The Joint Congressional Committee on Taxation is getting nowhere in its effort to ascertain how much revenue is being lost through loopholes in the tax laws.

Experts have estimated that as much as five billion dollars in business income is annually escaping taxation under one loophole alone.

This loophole is Section 101, which exempts from taxation educational institutions, cooperatives, foundations, and a wide range of religious and philanthropic organizations. The joint committee's so-far-ineffectual study is aimed largely at gathering data on the operation of this loophole.

The study was initiated last year by the Eightieth Congress. The Treasury Department was directed to send out a new tax form (No. 990) to all organizations claiming exemption under Section 101. The form was to provide basic statistical information never before assembled.

Returns Sketchy So Far

To date, the returns have been very sketchy. A large number of organizations have disregarded the form entirely. Many others have sent in incomplete data.

As a result, Colin Stam, longtime staff director of the joint committee who is in charge of the study, is faced with the prospect of having to report little progress when the committee reconvenes in January. That means Congress may again by-pass this dynamite-loaded problem.

Although revising Section 101 has been discussed many years, and numerous hearings have been held, nothing concrete has ever been attempted. Former Representative Harold Knutsen (R., Minn.), who headed the House Ways and Means Committee in the Eightieth Congress, was defeated largely because of his attempts to tax farm cooperatives.

No Decision Reached

Shortly before Congress adjourned last week, leaders of the joint committee discussed the feasibility of proposing at the next session the taxing of educational institutions owning large commercial concerns. Colleges and universities in all parts of the country own such properties, with tax-free incomes totaling hundreds of millions of dollars annually. No decision was reached by the committee leaders.

Note: Attorney General Howard McGrath was a $15,000-a-year trustee of a tax-exempt foundation owning numerous textile mills. He gave up this sinecure when he quit the Senate to enter the Truman Cabinet.

Mortgage Insurance Bill Signed by Truman

Yesterday Truman yesterday signed into law a bill which increases by $2,250,000,000 the Government's authority to purchase and insure mortgages for private home building.

The measure continues the mortgage insurance programs for four months. They would have expired October 31.

The legislation was a stopgap resolution passed after the Senate side-tracked a long-range bill to aid private building in the closing days of the recent session.

Our Political Economy

By Ysabel and Robert Rennie

Spotlight On CEA

JUST as it sometimes takes an earthquake to lay bare a fault in the ground, it took a crisis in the Council of Economic Advisers to make clear the fuzzy legislation that went into its making.

The CEA was created by the Employment Act of 1946. This was an aqueous version of the headier Full Employment Bill of 1945. The original was so watered that the final Act passed the Senate unanimously, committing the Government to maintain "conditions under which there will be afforded useful employment opportunities . . . for those able, willing and seeking to work," by such means as might be "consistent with . . . other essential considerations of national policy."

The commitment was purposely vague. The original bill had a definite objective in view, which was to foresee and counteract unemployment. It provided for a national production and employment budget to be presented annually by the President, and where private spending seemed inadequate, it required the Government to fill the gap with public investment.

WHEN it came up for vote, Congress cut the heart out of the Full Employment Bill. It even shied away from the term full employment. Discarding any pledge of public spending, it also threw out the production and employment budget and created instead an innocuous and ill-defined board to be known as the Council of Economic Advisers. There was only one clear function assigned to the council, and that was to make an annual report to the President. There was no hint of what this report should contain.

The council was not in itself a bad idea. Its early activity held promise, and the staff economists it gathered were top-flight. As our first economic general staff, the CEA could have contributed much to a clearer understanding of the business cycle. Instead, it mounted its horse and rode off in several directions. The reports it issued ran the gamut of economics from social security to the preservation of timber resources. Public statements by the advisers ranged even further afield.

This would not have been possible had the council's functions been pinpointed by law. It might not have happened had the advisers themselves been different men. But the fact is that it did happen.

AT LEAST two of the advisers were fervent doctrinaires who went about the country advocating their favorite policies. Unfortunately, these were at opposite poles. One adviser was an uncompromising Keynesian whose thinking was colored by the depression of the 1930s, and who could not bring himself to believe in continuing prosperity. The other was a moralist who turned Jeremy Bentham's ideas upside down and preached economic altruism to labor, industry and agriculture.

Needless to say, when it came time to write a report, the council was on a three-horned dilemma. It not only had to reconcile the Manchester School of Economics with Lord Keynes, but it had to say nothing which would contravene Administration policies.

The public nature of the report makes it almost impossible for the council to say what it thinks, even if it can agree on what it thinks, which is hard for doctrinaires. Over the years there is bound to be a conflict between what the pure technician would advise, and the pure politician accept.

WHEN the council was set up, there were still some lingering hopes that it could foresee depression, and by foresight prevent it.

These hopes were necessarily Utopian. Not only is the council forced to pussyfoot on policy, but even what prescience it does possess has no chance of being translated into action.

In Britain, cabinet advisers can and often do write law. This is because ministers are responsible to Parliament and there is not the division of powers which means divided responsibility. Here the President proposes, but it is Congress which disposes.

Under the circumstances, the council has no more chance of warding off depression than a rabbit's foot. It does, however, have a proper place in Government. Its place is to advise the President as frankly as it can.

It is merest quibbling to argue whether an economist should testify to Congress. Nourse would not speak to our lawmakers, yet he made frequent after-dinner speeches. Keyserling was just as public in his views.

WHAT we have had is less a Council of Economic Advisers than a Chatauqua circuit to cajole, exhort and plead with the public. As Nourse's example has proved, this can be tactless politics and it is poor economics.

No one would expect the Central Intelligence Agency to stump the country. It is the function of advisers to inform, not to make policy. A doctor can tell his patient that if he does not stop smoking, he will have high blood pressure. That is advice. But if the patient would rather have high blood pressure than give up tobacco, that is policy.

In the last analysis, only the President can weight the economically advisable against the politically possible. What he needs is advisers with what President Roosevelt called "a passion for anonymity." There is no reason for the council to publish its views, and the law should be amended to take it off this hook. Let the President make the economic report, and let the council retire to that decent privacy which is indispensable to effective functioning.

The Gallup Poll

Public Views Found Mixed On Congress

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 25—Voter opinions on the Eighty-first Congress Congress are decidedly mixed. How you regard the achievements and shortcomings of the session just ended depends largely on whether you are a Republican or Democrat.

In a national survey voters were asked to tell whether they think the Eighty-first Congress is better or worse than its predecessor, the much-maligned Eightieth.

Most persons replied either that they didn't know or that they could see little difference between the two. About a third made a definite choice, most of them favoring the Eighty-first.

Here is the national vote:

"From the impressions you have thus far, based on things you have heard or read, how do you think the present Eighty-first Congress in Washington compares with the one just before it—that is, the Eightieth?"

81st Congress better	26%
81st Congress worse	13
Both about the same	27
Neither very good	7

Republicans Not Happy

The chief difference between Republican and Democratic attitudes is shown in the following table. Republicans who expressed a definite choice took a generally sour attitude toward the Eighty-first while Democrats were much more favorable.

The Eighty-first Congress failed to follow Administration demands for repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act. Little public sentiment has been found in Institute surveys for outright repeal, except among labor union members.

2 Doctors to Examine Thomas

Two private physicians will examine Representative J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.) in Washington today to determine if he is well enough to stand trial on payroll "kickback" charges.

Arrangements for the private examination were made yesterday between U. S. Attorney George Morris Fay and Thomas' lawyer, William H. Collins.

District Court Judge Alexander Holtzoff Monday ordered Thomas to undergo a new medical examination yesterday at Walter Reed Hospital, after Collins argued that his client's health would be endangered if the trial were held on schedule, November 7.

Collins said that Thomas called the hospital early yesterday morning to make arrangements and was told by the hospital that the examination was to be done privately.

An Army department spokesman said that Thomas "is not now considered critically ill and for that reason the Army did not see fit to admit him as a patione or for examination." All Walter Reed clinical records will be turned over to the private physicians who will examine Thomas, officials said.

Fay said the two physicians will report to Judge Holtzoff Friday.

Thomas, former chairman of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, was indicted early this year for allegedly collecting salary kickbacks from his congressional employes. He also was charged with collecting Government pay for persons who never worked in his office. He was operated on at Walter Reed last March, after an internal hemorrhage.

Old Letters Show Monroe's Worries

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

President James Monroe may have had an era of good feeling in Washington, but he faced hard times at his Oak Hill estate in the spring of 1817.

Underfed horses, too richly fed servants, sulky German farm help and mounting farm debts were a few of the problems that almost daily plagued Monroe, the farmer, during his first few weeks as the fifth President of the United States.

These side bars of presidential history came to light yesterday as result of publication last week of a story that two missing White House mantels are presently located at Monroe's Oak Hill estate, near Aldie, Va.

Charles Kohen of 1900 F st. nw. read the mantel report in The Washington Post, reflected a moment, and dug into his safe for a musty envelope marked "Monroe Papers." Kohen runs a coin and stamp shop at 716 17th st. nw., but makes a specialty of collecting bits on past Presidents.

His bit on Monroe, the absentee farmer who was set on making his Virginia property self-supporting, is contained in a series of letters written by his then farm manager, Thomas Slaughter.

The letters are neatly penned on fine quality, watermarked paper. Kohen said he purchased them about fifteen years ago from a farmer who lived near Oak Hill. Some were badly scorched, having been salvaged when the farmer's house burned.

The collection of notes, addressed to "Col. James Monroe, Executive Mansion, Washington City," indicate that Tom Slaughter was a short-timer.

The first letter was dated January 31, 1817, and said:

"I arrived here yesterday and have had no opportunity yet to examine the situation." He promised to check over the livestock and fields for a prompt report back to Washington.

Slaughter's last business letter to the author of the Monroe Doctrine was sent off on April 15, less than three months later, asking for a polite "discharge from your service . . . my mind is totally confused . . . my tasks are too arduous . . . but we now, I hope, are on friendly terms and may ever continue so . . . I am, Sir, Your Obedient Servant, Thomas Slaughter."

Farming the Monroe estate in those pre-price-support days, without the on-the-spot overseeing of the President, became too thick for Slaughter.

This was six years before the famous Oak Hill house was built, when Monroe was living in the old cottage there on occasional weekend visits. He was striving to improve the land for the time when he could retire to the estate. He had inherited the Virginia acres in 1808 from his uncle, Judge Joseph Jones.

Some excerpts from Slaughter's accounting to "Colonel" Monroe tell part of the story.

Indoctrinating some recently arrived German workers to Southern farming inspired a letter dated February 19.

"I want to guard you against forming an opinion too favorable to them until a fair trial can be made. Ever since they arrived my attention has been turned almost entirely toward them in making their situation as agreeable as possible. But that appears to have had little effect upon their minds. In the first place they are choice in their diet; secondly, the appearance of their houses, and thirdly, they have an aversion to work.

"These three bad qualities combined will render them totally inept for your service, as I know when you were about to purchase them, you counted upon getting hard laboring, industrious men."

President Monroe's concern for continued good credit in Loudoun County was evident in this letter.

"You also requested me," wrote Slaughter, "to find out the amount of your brother's debt." (Joseph Jones Monroe, a gentleman farmer most of his life, lived at Oak Hill during this period.)

"I have made inquiries and find many debts due from the estate. But whether on your account or his I am not at present able to say . . .

"I must conclude by saying that your presence here would be a great service to us all."

Food for the help was the principal problem on Slaughter's mind when he wrote President Monroe on April 1.

"By your brother's request I have undertaken to write you giving his opinion in respect to the manner that your people and others on your estate should be supplied with meat.

"He says bacon here is too good a quality to be used for common laborers and thinks you had better write Mrs. Voss in Alexandria to send up by return wagon some barrels of pork and also some fish.

"He likewise says that if the Negroes, German miller and ditchers are to use the bacon here, it would last but a very short time. His observations, I believe, are very correct."

Slaughter concluded this note with a complaint that the horses "don't have enough strength" to do the kind of "deep plowing you request."

Three days later, on April 4, it was money. Slaughter wrote: "I sent by James (the coachman) three pots of butter and the cloth you spoke of. I found it a difficult matter to purchase the cart you mentioned, as I was without money.

"However, I succeeded in getting it by borrowing the sum on a promise it would be repaid within the week. The cart and harness cost $65.

"I was also obliged to purchase two ploughs. Mr. Harding had two stocked at his own home house, for which the money is looked for immediately . . .

"I undergo much fatigue, but that is trifling when compared to my great uneasiness of mind, feeling that when you come to the farm and find things not to answer your expectation . . .

"These are some articles that, if they could be brought up in the cart, would be helpful. One or two bushels of New England potatoes and a small bar of soap for the Germans—although they do not deserve it—sole and upper leather for Negroes' shoes, and some carpenter tools. Many such articles could be purchased here, but you supposed they might be bought on better terms in Georgetown. Your Obt. Servant, Thomas Slaughter.

"P. S. Mr. Harding has prevailed on me to inform you that he is in great want of money but it is with reluctance that I comply with his request."

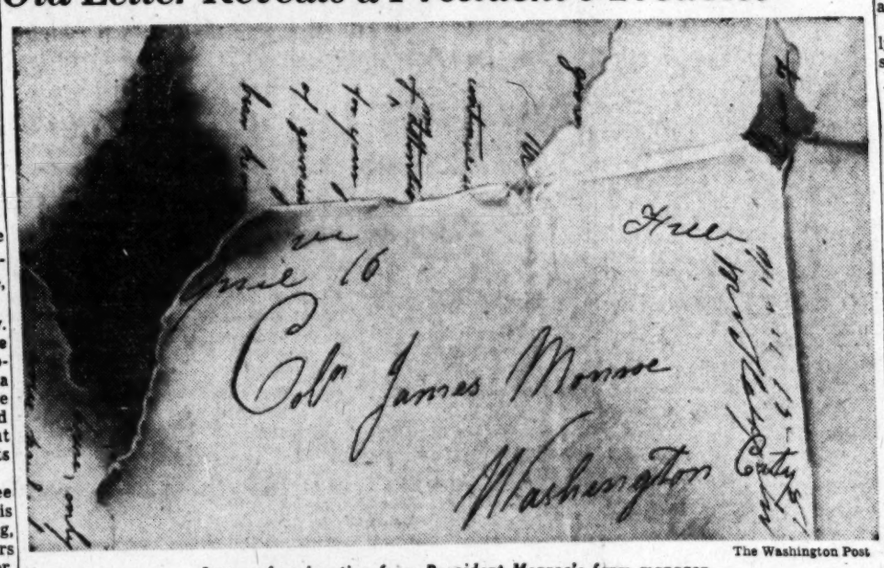
Colonial historians explain that men of even the most substantial means frequently ran into the same trouble of coming by hard cash because of the cumbersome banking methods of issuing currency.

Slaughter's April 10 note was short and to the point. He acknowledged receipt of $220 for the farm help, but reported that one of the Germans had run off to Baltimore with $195 of the President's money, stolen from Slaughter's room.

"The fault lies with them, not me, if they don't work," Slaughter again explained to the Colonel in another crack at the Germans.

The swan song came five days later.

Old Letter Reveals a President's Troubles



The Washington Post

Letter of resignation from President Monroe's farm manager

"Necessity at length compels me to trouble you again with my situation," T. S. began. "It will no doubt appear strange to you to hear that I have a desire to dissolve our bargain, as by agreement, either of us had the right to do so at pleasure.

"I would assign many reasons for wishing a discharge from your service. But a few particulars will suffice for the present. In the first place, I am responsible for more, if I speak candidly, than can possibly be done. Secondly, my mind is totally confused. My peace is destroyed day and night, which renders me miserable, and thirdly, I find that I am compelled, living the distance I do from my parents, to be at my expense for clothing.

"Could I live in peace and quiet it would be far from my wish to separate from your service. But the reverses in my case from the the favors you have done me and the always kind treatment I have experienced from you, are just too much.

"Experience has clearly proved to me that I have undertaken too much. I find that justice can be done to no part of the business assigned to me. The task is too arduous, and these are grounds on which my reasons of a discharge are founded.

"We are now, I hope, on friendly terms and may even continue so."

His parting shot:

"You wish your horses and mules kept in good order. It certainly would be desirable for them but it is impossible. The greater part of them is much worsened by hard labor and other causes. Labor is very severe, and but little to feed them with. It is not expected that they can be made fat. With Great Esteem, I am, Sir, Your Obt. Servant, Thomas Slaughter."

NOW'S THE BARGAIN TIME TO VISIT EUROPE

...special winter fares plus devalued rates overseas make TWA's fares LOWEST EVER!

WHAT BETTER TIME than NOW to visit Europe? It's the season of bright festivals and fairs. The weather is wonderful for leisurely sightseeing. And best of all, devalued currency in the finest vacation countries abroad means that every dollar you spend now buys more than before. Hotels are cheaper, living costs less, and you can afford more fun everywhere.

YOU GET a double bargain on your transportation, too, when you fly both ways by TWA. New 60-day round-trip fares save you up to 25% across the Atlantic. And devalued air fares save you up to 30% for travel beyond Paris and Lisbon. There's no reduction, of course, in the superb comfort, luxury and 300-mph speed of dependable TWA Skyliner service.

Extra good because Sunnybank is always extra fresh

1. There's a reason for this extra goodness! Sunnybank Margarine is made only on special order in small batches. Then as soon as it's packaged . . .

2. Sunnybank is rushed to your grocer. It's shipped direct from producer to warehouse to store. You get it fresher—because you get it faster!

3. How you'll love its flavor! On sandwiches, vegetables, hot breads. Sunnybank always tastes "fresh made." Delicate, delicious—even in cooked dishes. Try a pound soon. Extra fresh Sunnybank!

And Sunnybank is extra handy, too!

READY-COLORED—Rich golden yellow, as sunny as its name. Serve it at the table or use for cooking. Sunnybank is ideal for both needs.

READY-CUBED—4 standard-size quarter-pound cubes to the carton. Each cube individually wrapped to simplify serving and storing.

Due to federal taxes, yellow Sunnybank costs a little more. So if you're counting pennies remember, Sunnybank is available also uncolored. Same delicious flavor at a greater saving.

Audience Shares Strange Problem

By Richard L. Coe

MAN'S PATHETIC, INEXORABLE struggle to bring order out of the chaos of his earth means that there are as many struggles as there are people. The unique magic of the movies, with their ability to make an unlikely struggle part of the experience of all, has surely made the movies the vast force for good and evil they are today in our culture.

And while the movies—whom everyone is at liberty to criticize and does—often are guilty of giving us people in the guise of shoddy daydreams, they also are able to give us, through the approach of realism, people whose experiences, unlike anything one personally may have imagined or considered, become strikingly real to us.

With this fidelity to real life, in setting and facial integrity, the most unlikely story can grip us. Such a picture, its story taken from facts, is "Lost Boundaries," at the Dupont.

Louis de Rochemont, who originated the "March of Time" series, is telling of a Negro doctor who could not get the work he was trained for among his own people and accepted, against his better judgment, a comfortable practice as a white doctor in a New Hampshire village. Slow to welcome any stranger, the villagers finally take him to their hearts in recognition of his selfless service. After many years the secret leaks out and the future of the man, his wife and two children is in question.

"LOST BOUNDARIES." Film Classics release produced by Louis de Rochemont. Adapted from W. L. White's documentary story in "The Readers' Digest" by Charles A. Palmer. Screen play by Virginia Shaler and Eugene Ling. Additional dialogue by Maxime Furlaud and Ormonde de Kay. Music by Louis Applebaum. Photographie by William J. Miller. Directed by Alfred L. Werker. At the Dupont.

THE CAST

Marcia Carter ..... Beatrice Pearson
Scott Carter ..... Mel Ferrer
Howard Carter ..... Richard Hylton
Shelley Carter ..... Susan Douglas
Lieutenant Thompson .... Canada Lee
Rev. John Taylor..Rev. Robert H. Dunn
Mrs. Mitchell ..... Grace Coppin
Andy ..... Carleton Carpenter
Clint Adams ..... Seth Arnold
Mr. Mitchell ..... Wendell Holmes
Alvin Tupper ..... Parker Fennelly
Loren Tucker ..... Ralph Riggs

The story, a true one, was first told by W. L. White in The Reader's Digest. Some five writers have now adapted it to the screen with de Rochemont as producer.

This, then, is not the sort of story one would daydream about; one would hardly seem a part of such a curious case (though the picture states that there are about eight million with Negro blood in this country who "pass" as whites). But by giving us reasonably unfamiliar actors and strictly realistic settings, de Rochemont makes his audience feel a part of such a story.

Impressive, Compassionate

To ask the film to "solve" this problem is absurd, for it is one we have only begun to recognize, let alone answer. Naturally, the ending is tentative, just as the endings of "Home of the Brave" and "Gentleman's Agreement" were tentative. One is certainly not convinced that the young girl who looks like any other bobby-soxer will be able to mate with the boy who's been dating her. Whether the son will be able to overcome the shock to his system and whether his girl will, either, is by no means convincingly resolved.

But the statement of the predicament is impressive: the doctor accepted the job which led to his passing as white exactly as we all do things wisdom cautions against. Certainly a flaw in the story (as in the actual case) was the doctor's application for a Navy commission which obviously would have given his secret away; this is hard to believe, a device that strains credulity.

Yet, by de Rochemeont's technique, by Alfred L. Werker's direction and William J. Miller's photography, one is carried into these lives with quiet compassion. The acting by a large cast, some nonprofessionals, is simple and rings sincere. Mel Ferrer, established as a writer and director, acts the central role convincingly, and Beatrice Pearson, heretofore an ingenue, ages effectively as the wife. Richard Hylton makes a hopeful screen debut as the son and Susan Douglas is the daughter.

Canada Lee, who will make two personal apearances at 5:30 and 9:40 today at the Dupont, has the role of a kindly police lieutenant.

CHRIS ROBINSON, the singing footballer of the Warner's "High Button Shoes," has just completed a stay of 18 months in London, where he was that melodic cowboy, Curley, in Drury Lane's "Oklahoma!" . . . Recipient of two especially favorable Washington reviews, the rangy Texan is being rewarded with more work . . . Several scenes of the capsule musical have been cut to allow him another song . . . His stories of the Londoners he met while singing the best of our musicals are titivating, including one lulu about an aging and royal lady who could drink him under the table . . . Figuratively, of course.

COMFORT FROM A FATHER—Susan Douglas, as the daughter who is shocked to learn she has Negro blood, is comforted by her father, a doctor who has kept his secret for 20 years, finely acted by Mel Ferrer in "Lost Boundaries" at the Dupont

B. & L. Savings Set New Peak Of 311 Million

By S. Oliver Goodman

More than 173,000 Washingtonians had a record savings total of $311,500,000 in the 27 local building and loan associations as of September 30.

This was reported last night at the annual election and dinner meeting of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League in the Mayflower.

F. Willson Camp, league secretary, noted that the savings total had advanced $22,500,000 in the first nine months this year. Camp added that outstanding loans and assets also gained in the first nine months, but the rate of increase was less than in the same period last year.

Loans outstanding on September 30 totaled 327 million dollars, a gain of 9½ million since the start of this year. Assets of $360,624,637 were up about 12 million, Camp said.

Fred A. Smith was elected president of the league, succeeding Edward A. McAleer who served for two terms. William H. Dyer was elevated to vice president. Re-elected officers were Camp, secretary; Robrt E. Buckley, treasurer, and C. Clinton James, general counsel.

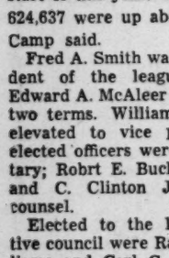
Elected to the league's executive council were Raymond C. Williams and Carl C. Smuck. Holdovers are Edward K. Jones, E. M. Emmerich, Martin A. Cook and John P. Balster.

Congressman Dewey Short (R., Mo.) was the guest speaker and his witticisms kept the more than 200 building and loan leaders in a jovial mood.

A few of his typical remarks: "Our country is one of checks and balances, but lately has become one of all checks and no balances. . . . The past Congress will not be known as the Eighty-first but the Eighty-worst . . . It should be congratulated for things that it didn't do."

NET DECLINES: Southern Railway Co. reported net operating income of $2,089,800 for September, against $2,333,054 in same 1948 month. Balance after charges was $1,159,130 against $1,379,903 in September, 1948. Balance after charges totaled $7,043,621 for first nine months, compared with $13,769,718 in like period last year.

INSTALLED: Roy J. Devereaux, manager of the Washington office of B. F. Goodrich Co., was installed last night as president of the Washington Rubber Group. Other inducted officers at the annual banquet in the Hamilton Hotel include: T. A. Werkinthin, vice president; Norman Bekedahl, secretary, and Elliott A. Buzkin, treasurer. The group is made up of 250 persons in Government, military, scientific and industrial activities having an interest in rubber.



Devereaux

HARD-HIT: An 81 per cent drop in Norfolk & Western Railway's net operating income for September was blamed yesterday on the coal strike. The road, mainly a coal carrier, reported September net operating income of $743,409, as compared with $3,868,951 in the 1948 month. President Robert H. Smith said the situation had resulted in a layoff of about 25 per cent of the railway's workers.

ODD LOTS: Stockholders of International Paper Co. will vote December 20 on a proposal to split common stock on the basis of two for one . . . Dun & Bradstreet reported business bankruptcies in week ended October 20 totaled 181, against 172 in previous week and 124 in like 1948 week . . . Willys-Overland reported its export business since end of the war has totaled $111,856,000. Its one hundreth thousand vehicle to be sold overseas has just been shipped . . . Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line Co. shareholders will vote December 7 on a two-for-one stock split up plan . . . Deposits in the Nation's 531 mutual savings banks gained 682 million dollars in the first nine months this year, compared with a rise of 641 million for the full year 1948 . . . A special review of distilling company stocks has been issued by Hemphill, Noyes, Graham, Parsons & So. . . . Refrigerator egg fixtures in Chicago dropped as much as the 2-cent-a-dozen daily limit yesterday in active selling.

EARNINGS: Socony-Vacuum Oil Co. reported estimated net income of 66 million dollars or $2.07 a common share for the first nine months this year, compared with 103 million dollars or $3.30 a share in the same 1948 period. Other earnings statements:

U. S. Steel Net At 39 Million Before Strike

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—United States Steel Corp., giant of the industry, reported today its net income was $39,171,144, equal to $1.26 a common share, in the three months preceding the present strike of its CIO union workers.

Directors, holding their first regular meeting since the walkout, ordered a dividend of 50 cents a share on the common stock, the same as was declared three months ago. It was made payable December 10 to shareholders of record November 4.

United States Steel's earnings for the third quarter of 1949 declined from $44,123,595, or $1.45 a share in the preceding period, and compared with $34,599,132, or $1.09 a share, in the similar 1948 quarter.

This decline reflected a pre-strike falling off in steel output by the corporation's subsidiaries. Their facilities were operated at 82.7 per cent of capacity during the period, against 99.8 per cent in the second quarter.

Shipments of steel products by the corporation during the latest three-month period totaled 4,781,000 net tons, against 5,276,441 tons in the preceding quarter and 4,916,185 in the like period a year ago.

For the first nine months this year, shipments amounted to 15,549,000 net tons, compared with 15,129,874 in the similar 1948 period.

Net income of United States Steel for the first three quarters of 1949 was reported as $133,223,409, equal to $4.38 a common share, against $88,042,150, or $2.65 a share, in the comparable months a year ago.

New York Cotton

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—Cotton futures registered gains of 40 to 85 cents a bale in active dealings today. A continued good demand for cotton goods, recent increased entries of cotton into the Government loan, and expectations that recent rains will slow the crop movement and lower the grades, stimulated buying by commission houses and New Orleans.

Traffic Signal Urged Before 'Child Is Killed'

Erection of a traffic signal at New Hampshire ave. and Ray rd., Takoma Park, Md., before "a child is killed" was urged upon the Maryland State Roads Commission yesterday by the Prince George County Commissioners.

The roads commission had replied to an earlier letter urging the light by stating that a survey had been made at the request of the Takoma Park City Council but that such action was not warranted by conditions. The roads commission suggested enforcement of the 30-mile speed limit.

County Commissioner J. Hammond Welch, sr., said he had waited 45 minutes once to get across that intersection and characterized it as the "most dangerous unprotected spot in the county."

Commissioner John H. Beall moved that a letter be sent to the roads commission informing its members that "we don't want to wait until a child is killed" before the light is installed.

The J. Enos Ray Elementary School is near the corner and many small children cross there daily, the commissioners said.

The commissioners deferred action on installing air conditioning in the grand jury room of the court house since it won't be needed until the April term. State's Attorney A. Gwynn Bowie said the jurymen and women could not leave doors and windows open because of the requirement for secrecy in their deliberations and that the room becomes unbearably stuffy.

The county commissioners directed their counsel, Jerrold V. Powers, to prepare an ordinance that would make it a misdemeanor punishable by fine or imprisonment to fail to pay a taxi fare. Chief Brown said his department had received many complaints from taxi drivers.

A letter commending the commissioners for voting to install voting machines in the county was received from the county League of Women Voters. A permit to erect a school, convent and church on New Hampshire ave. between Larch and Linden aves. Takoma Park, was granted to John M. Walton, acting for Our Lady of Sorrows Catholic Church, Takoma Park.

Navy Group to Discuss Bladder Disorders

Area physicians are invited to attend a symposium on bladder disorders of nervous origin, at the United States Naval Hospital, Bethesda, Md., at 1 p. m. Friday.

Principal speaker will be Lieut. W. W. Miller, MC, USN, who will talk on "The Neurogenic Bladder, Its Treatment and Diagnosis."

Gets Pay Hike

Howe Named Montgomery Fire Marshal

The appointment of Charles H. Howe, jr., of Lutherville, Md., as Montgomery County Fire Marshal was approved yesterday by the County Council.

Howe, 36, was appointed by County Manager Irving G. McNayr, on recommendation of a committee of Volunteer Fire Department chiefs named to screen applicants. His appointment is effective November 14.

The new marshal was one of two candidates recommended originally by the committee. The other, Wallace A. McBain, of Somers Point, N. J., was appointed September 27, but declined the post.

Howe eliminated himself at that time by his refusal to accept the minimum salary for the job's classification, $4800. Since then the county personnel board, on request of the chiefs' committee, reviewed the position and raised the pay to a classification calling for a starting minimum of $5200.

Howe has been chief engineer for public protection for the Maryland Fire Underwriters Rating Bureau since June 1947. Previously he had held several positions dealing with fire prevention and protection with the United States Army and Air Force, and the Fire Insurance Rating Bureau of New Jersey.

The council denied an application of C. Y. Stephens for zoning of 8.84 acres from residential to commercial occupied by the Olney Theater and a building housing theater personnel.

The council emphasized that its action was not to be construed as an effort to close the theater. It will give consideration, it said in a written opinion, to remedying the present "doubtful legal status" of the theater by "appropriate authority to be granted to the Board of Zoning Appeals to permit use of residential land for certain forms of dramatic entertainment."

In other business the council requested appointment of Greydon S. Tolson, head of the county tree division, as a State forest warden; approved leasing of space in the Professional Building, Rockville, to house the Department of Public Works; urged all nonregistered citizens to register for voting in next year's elections, and indorsed sponsorship by the Junior Chamber of Commerce of Silver Spring of a public speaking contest for high school students in connection with National Radio Week beginning October 30.

Joseph B. Simpson, jr., attorney for E. Brooke Lee, county Democratic leader, sent the council a letter advising that county employes have "committed trespass" by erecting signs and trimming trees on land owned by Lee which the county has been enjoined from selling at public auction.

Video Color Protection Asked

By The Associated Press

Philco Corp. yesterday demanded that the public's investment in existing television sets be fully preserved in any governmental authority for color operations.

Testifying at the Federal Communications Commission hearings on the color question, David B. Smith of Philadelphia, Philco vice president for research and engineering, formally requested that FCC "assure the public" to this effect.

If color televising is given a go-ahead signal, Smith said, the standards should be such that present set owners could still get all programs in black and white, without any additional expense.

That way, he said, color reception would become a matter of personal option, based on the viewer's desire to see color or his ability to pay the additional expense necessary to receive it.

Not Asking FCC to Wait

Smith noted that he had not seen any color system which was ready for public use on these terms now. Philco, he testified, is working on such a system, but he said his company is not asking the commission to wait for it.

Radio Corporation of America and Columbia Broadcasting System, proposing rival color systems, meanwhile carried on a dispute over a scheduled comparative demonstration of their systems, now set for November 14.

RCA has asked a two months' postponement of these tests, saying it wants more time to test its equipment and that the delay will give Color Television, Inc., of San Francisco, proposing a third system, an opportunity to get in on the comparative show.

Columbia asked the commission today to go ahead on the original schedule and get the color question decided. It said it is ready for the RCA comparison here and that if necessary it will fly its equipment to the West Coast for competitive showing against CTI there.

The CBS statement accused RCA of "setting up roadblocks of delay" in order to avoid a direct comparison at this time. Columbia asserted that recent separate demonstrations here showed "the markedly inferior performance of the RCA system."

"GAINS HUNDREDS OF HOURS FOR ME... THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS FOR MY BOSS!"

Gray AUDOGRAPH Model SOUNDWRITER

A wonderful change has taken place in our office since the day we did away with old-fashioned, time consuming shorthand and adopted AUDOGRAPH Soundwriting. Instead of spending a third of my time at the Boss' desk, notebook in hand, "taking dictation", I save hours in which to render far more valuable assistance . . . junior executive assistance . . . while the Boss dictates to his Audograph.

But that's only one of the many wonderful things the Audograph does for us! In addition to taking dictation, instructions and reports, it records both ends of the Boss' important telephone conversations, takes down every word at meetings and conferences and saves half the time and manpower in taking inventories. And because the Audograph is so light and compact, the Boss often takes it with him on business trips . . . uses it on trains, planes and even in his car . . . and mails the unbreakable plastic disc records to me for transcription.

Why not find out what the saving power of AUDOGRAPH'S exclusive combination of benefits and advantages can do in your business.

Which Car Offers You The Most for Your Money Today?

How do they compare in real comfort...in head room, leg room, arm room? How do they compare in engineering quality and in new mechanical features? How do they compare in performance and ease-of-driving?

This year thousands of motorists have asked these questions. They have compared cars in all price ranges. And as a result they have chosen De Soto as the car that gives them the most enjoyment and the most real value for the money. Make the comparison yourself. Come in and see the car that lets you drive without shifting, "the car designed with YOU in mind."

Law Asked on Fake Reports to Police

Legislation establishing a false report to police as a misdemeanor in Montgomery County was asked yesterday by Police Inspector James S. McAuliffe.

The proposed ordinance was one of four recommended by McAuliffe in his report to the County Council on police activities.

McAuliffe pointed out that detectives may work days on a case only to find the report is false.

Other Laws Urged

Other recommended laws would: (1) require tourist camps and overnight lodging houses to keep a register of occupants for police inspection, (2) prohibit children under 18 from playing pin ball machines, and (3) require operators of pawn shops and secondhand shops to report description of articles.

McAuliffe said the tourist-camp regulation is sought as a protective measure to insure "proper" use of such facilities. He said that reports have been received of children playing "grocery change" on pinball machines.

Council President Frederic P. Lee requested McAuliffe and Chief Charles M. Orme, who also was present, to confer with the county attorney's office in drafting the proposed laws for introduction next May.

County Called Clean

McAuliffe stated that Montgomery County "is as clean a county, and has as good a police department, as any of its size in the State. I'll go further, as any in the country, he added. The morale of the department is good, and its equipment excellent."

Several factors combine to keep the county free from gambling, McAuliffe said.

He cited constant efforts of police to keep the gamblers out. "Gamblers would move in immediately if they thought they could get away with it," he said. He added that Circuit Court judges imposed jail sentences instead of fines, and juries found gamblers guilty when cases were made against them.

Definition Of Hotel Brings Suit

The Franklin Park Hotel, Inc., 1332 I st. nw., yesterday asked District Court to declare the District's regulation defining hotels as unconstitutional.

The hotel was denied a license to operate as such in January because it has no kitchen, the suit charges.

A hotel in modern times has assumed "a generic meaning," the suit adds, claiming that the Franklin Park's 207 rooms for transients are typical of "any first-rate hotel" even though there is not kitchen.

Revised regulations in the District require that any building with not less than 30 habitable rooms used exclusively for transients must have a kitchen and a dining room. The dining rom must open on a lobby and must accommodate at least 30 persons if the building is to be called a hotel.

The suit names as defendants the Commissioners and Chatham T. Nottingham, District superintendent of licenses.

Nottingham said yesterday that establishments failing to comply with the definition have been given a year's grace to stop using the word "hotel." Strict enforcement will commence November 1, he added.

2 Men Fined, Jailed On Numbers Charge

Two men were fined $100 and given sentences of 30 days in jail yesterday after being convicted of operating a lottery by Arlington County Court Judge Hugh Reid.

They were John Nails, 47, of 1014 S. Queen st., Arlington, and Vick Carlo, 25, of 1349 Maryland ave. ne.

The Sad Case of the Laughing Girl!

Widow Branning loved pictures and she had many of them hanging in her living room. Her favorite was a framed magazine cover of a beautiful, laughing girl.

Widow Branning came home late one night to find her house ransacked. She rushed into her living room, shot a quick, anguished glance at the laughing girl. Sure enough, the picture was crooked . . . sure enough her savings she'd hidden behind it were gone.

A matter of principle . . . or just bullheadedness?

We believe that the telegram Mayor William O'Dwyer sent to Mr. Benjamin Fairless is the most important statement that has been made on the Steel strike to date. It is our opinion that it should be read carefully by everyone.

Mr. Benjamin Fairless
United States Steel Corporation
Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania

The steel dispute is becoming a national calamity. Layoffs in industries throughout the country have started. Others will follow. Economic paralysis is setting in.

Why?

You have told us that a great principle is at stake.

This is the question:

Should employees in steel be required to add to what their employers pay for pensions and social insurance.

When this dispute began the President appointed a Fact Finding Board. This Board made an excellent report. It was acclaimed throughout the country. Laudatory editorials appeared in newspapers everywhere. Neither side was bound to accept the report and the President wisely did not insist that they must.

But now only one issue remains unresolved. The Board made a recommendation on that issue just as it did on all the others now settled. It recommended against employee contributions to pension and insurance plans.

Is this issue so fundamental as to justify your rejection of the Board's recommendation?

Maybe so, but a lot of companies have already settled.

As a matter of fact, Andrew Carnegie, one of the founders of U. S. Steel, introduced a pension in 1901 entirely paid for by his steel company.

Jones & Laughlin, a large steel producer, has a company financed pension for its employees.

So does Bethlehem Steel, one of the biggest.

Ford accepted a non-contributory plan the other day, and many large companies—like Consolidated Edison—have had such plans for years.

Top executives in steel companies as well as other industries receive pensions without making contributions.

Iron Age, the Steel Industry magazine, said in an editorial after the report of the Steel Fact Finding Board was issued:

> "Steel Management now has a tremendous responsibility. . . Now it does not have much to fight about—or at least not enough to plunge the country into a steel strike. . ."

I ask you, Mr. Fairless, is this the kind of issue on which to paralyze the economy of this country?

Is this a matter of principle or just bullheadedness?

The public has a vital stake in the prompt settlement of the national steel strike.

As Mayor of New York City, I know full well the tremendous effect this strike is having and will have on communities throughout the country.

You and your Company have a great public responsibility. Other steel companies invariably follow the pattern you set.

I urge you, Mr. Fairless, to review the position your Company has taken. Meet forthwith with the representative of the Steelworkers. Work out a settlement without further delay.

WILLIAM O'DWYER,
Mayor of the City of New York

District of Columbia Industrial Union Council
OLVIER PALMER, President
GEORGE L. P. WEAVER, Secretary

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

IF YOU WANT to complain about the Redkins, as everybody seems to be doing, including the stockholders, there has been no genius, either, in the quarterbacking in the front office. George Marshall hasn't sparkled at all as the man who hires the coaches, and says who shall play for the Redskins.

The tepee boss right now is very tepid with respect to Head Coach Vice Admiral (ret.) John E. (Billick) Whelchel who gives Marshall the distinction of being the only civilian with a naval aide, but is slightly at sea in professional football.

POVICH

Marshall's ardor for Whelchel, a consuming thing last winter when all of a sudden he gave the retiring admiral a five-year contract as head coach, apparently has cooled. At least he goes no farther than to say, "We don't fire coaches in midseason." He has stopped short of saying that Whelchel will be his coach for the next five years, or even next season.

There has been criticism of the Redskins' choice of plays, but how about their choice of coaches? As the 55-percent owner and club president, that was Marshall's province and apparently he has batted .000 in that department.

In the grandiose manner, last winter, Marshall announced that he was on the point of naming as his new coach, an outstanding figure of the gridiron, a nationally-famous football man. Such was the buildup, that it was presumed Marshall would unveil no less than Frank Leahy or Earl Blaik or at least Alonzo Stagg. And then he brought forth Whelchel, and Redskin fans were asking, "Who him?"

Whelchel was indeed important—as a naval officer. But in the business of coaching pro football, he was a babe in the woods. He had success with Naval Academy teams, but no experience at all with the T-formation. They dropped him into a tough league, and had only Marshall's word for it that he would be a successful pro coach.

After Whelchel left the Naval Academy, Navy had the same painful experience with a green coach that the Redskins are now going through. They gave the job to Comdr. Oscar Hagberg, a submarine commander, almost as soon as he surfaced from his duties in the Pacific. Hagberg had been out of touch with football for years. In those war years at the Academy, he had all kinds of talent. He couldn't make it go.

IT HASN'T been all Whelchel's fault. The finger points strongly at Marshall, whose pre-season raves led the fans to expect better than he produced. At a time when the Redskins are suffering from their own feeble line play, Marshall can take no bows for trading off perhaps the best tackle in the league, Fred Davis, to the Bears.

He also dispatched another good tackle, Paul Stenn, to the Steelers, and John Sanchez to the Giants. Ed Cifers, the Bears' good end, was once Marshall's property. And so was Charley Conerly, the Giants' quarterback who last weekend pitched four touchdown passes in the upset of the Bears.

Marshall guessed badly when he hitched the Redskins' immediate future to Harry Gilmer, instead of Conerly. Football men who knew both players, gasped when the Redskin boss gave up his rights to Conerly for the pint-sized Gilmer, another novice at the T-formation like his coach. Whelchel complains he had seven rookies in against the Eagles most of the time. Who traded off the veterans?

IN THE YEARS when they were riding high, in the hottest football town in the land, they got rid of Ray Flaherty, a great popular coach, and over-reached themselves in the sale of season tickets.

Redskin games were virtually a closed corporation to the lucky season ticketholders. The fan who didn't have the resources to invest in season tickets at hiked prices was in foul shape. Only a scant few thousand went on general sale and they were quickly snatched up. The same clientele saw the games week after week and the Redskins weren't making any new fans in their zest to get the money in before the season started.

It wasn't smart, because they could have sold out, anyway, in those lush years and gained a far wider fan-interest than they now own. Thousands of empty seats this season and last are the natural result. Working up a sympathetic case for Marshall and his Redskin aids in their present mess is apt to be a bit laborious.

Pick-the-Winners

Terps, Navy, Hoyas, In Contest Line-up

GAMES OF THREE area teams provide a real test of skill for pigskin prognosticators in The Washington Post's Pick-the-Winners contest this week.

Navy pits its flaming spirit against Notre Dame; Maryland entertains a fast-improving South Carolina team at its homecoming and surprising Georgetown travels to New York to meet resurgent Fordham.

Each week the winner of the contest will receive two tickets to the Army-Navy game in Philadelphia, November 26, and an all-expenses-paid trip to this game for two persons.

The person submitting the most accurate entry each week also will receive four tickets to a major college or professional game in this area. The Washington Post will select this game.

The contest each week will include 21 major college games. Each contestant will select the winner (or tie) of 20 of these games. On the twenty-first game, each contestant will give the "Probable Score."

Kuhel Bids For Job at Kansas City

Joe Kuhel, displaced manager of the 1949 Nats, is bidding for the managerial job at Kansas City, it was disclosed in Washington yesterday.

Yankee Co-Owner Del Webb revealed Kuhel's candidacy in a conversation with Clark Griffith, Washington club president. "I gave Kuhel a high recommendation," said Griffith.

Kansas City, in the Yankee farm system, is Kuhel's home town.

A spokesman for the Yankees in New York last night admitted that "Kuhel's name has come up, and he will be considered if we decide on a change of managers." Bill Skiff managed the club last season, and there has been no announcement that he won't return.

Griffith admitted he had asked Webb about the Yankees' intentions concerning their surplus second baseman, George Stirnweiss. "Webb suggested I talk with George Weiss in New York," said Griffith.

Onslow Releases Miller as Coach

Chicago, Oct. 25 (AP).—In his first move since getting a vote of confidence for 1950, Manager Jack Onslow of the Chicago White Sox today released Coach Edmund (Bing) Miller, 55, who was with the club since 1942.

Miller, former star outfielder with the Philadelphia Athletics, joined the Sox as a coach under Jimmy Dykes, who preceded Ted Lyons and Onslow at the pale hose helm.

Onslow's decision to release Miller was announced by Sox Genera'-Manager Frank Lane. Onslow is at his home in Acton, Mass., from where he informed Lane he had "two or three" candidates in mind for Miller's job.

Cards Change Coach Setup

Chicago, Oct. 25 (AP). — The slumping Chicago Cardinals of the National Football League today broke up their Texan co-coaching combination of Buddy Parker and Phil Handler, then named 35-year-old Parker as the head coach.

Handler, 41, war-time head coach and associated with the Cardinals for 20 seasons, was appointed vice-president. He will be in charge of signing talent.

The change was announced by Club President Ray Bennigsen. It was not entirely unexpected in the wake of the Cardinals' third league defeat in a 24-7 loss to the Detroit Lions here Sunday. The Lions had been winless in four previous starts.

Parker will be in full command of the team. Dick Plasman and Marshall Goldberg will continue as assistants. A new aide will be Tackle Chet Bulger, who will remain an active player.

Parker has been with the Cardinals 13 seasons as player and then coach.

Bennigsen did not comment on reasons for the change. But it was reported he and owner Violet Bidwill were displeased with team progress under the split command.

Bunn Fights Millan on Turner Program Monday

Sonny Boy Bunn, District welterweight, with 24 victories in 26 professional matches, and Charlie Millan of Baltimore will headline next Monday night's boxing card at Joe Turner's Arena in a 10-rounder.

Bunn, 19, a senior at Armstrong High School, held the highly regarded New England champion, Johnny Cesario of Boston (conqueror of Charlie Fusario and other topnotchers) to an unusual draw in Hartford last week.

The sole judge of the bout, the referee, first gave Cesario the decision, 45 points to 43, but was forced to alter the decision when a sports writer discovered Sonny Boy was shorted by two points. An hour after the bout it was declared a draw at 45-45.

Before the Cesario match, Bunn stopped Aaron Perry in 10 rounds, and followed by knocking out Carey Mace, Hartford headliner, in five—both at Turner's.

5-3-3 Will Fix Things

Redskins Make Change—In Defense

'Whelchel's Job's Safe—Unless He Quits,' Says Chief

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

IN ONE BRILLIANT maneuver, the Washington Redskins yesterday settled all their difficulties.

It was that simple.

One stockholder's demands for a complete shakeup of the present organization, President George Marhall's burning dissatisfaction with the club's showing in a 49-14 loss to Philadelphia, unfavorable fan reaction to everything about the Redskins—all these problems were solved in the twinkling of an eye.

How?

By switching from a 5-4-2 to a 5-3-3 defense.

That was the cure-all at which the Redskins' better brains arrived so suddenly that the simplicity of the whole thing left them limp.

In support of this amazing change, Washington's embattled professionals re-signed a player they released last week. Dick Stovall, a combination center and guard from Abilene (Texas) Christian, was returned to the squad because of his "outstanding talent as a middle line-backer."

In every other respect the Redskins, despite suggestions of an upheaval from Attorney Leo DeOrsey, one of the principal stockholders, remained the same.

Head Coach Billick Whelchel and his staff went busily about preparations for Sunday's invasion of the Polo Grounds to meet the New York Bulldogs.

DeOrsey's office, when told a reporter was on the phone, said he was somewhere between his office and his home.

Marshall was left to answer all questions, his answers summing up like this:

"Yes, I was dissatisfied with the coaching in Sunday's game against Philadelphia. But Coach Welchel will not be released in the middle of the season, unless he should make up his own mind to quit."

"There will be no change in the ownership of the Redskins. DeOrsey and I have never discussed either buying out the other. Our stock goes together in the far-fetched event of a sale.

"I thought our players looked bad in the first half of the Philadelphia game, after which they trailed 35-7 but I liked the fact they didn't quit. Their extreme youth and inexperience, along with the Eagles' thorough seasoning, can be blamed a great deal for the loss."

If nothing else, the Redskins put their finger on the sore spot when they decided to try a new defense. In five games, three of them losses, they have allowed the opposition to gain 2012 yards. That's the worst record in the league. Even the winless Bulldogs have held their foes to 300 yards less.

Nothing, however, seems to be wrong with the Redskin offense except that it doesn't make enough points. Washington is the yardage champion there, too, with one for every year A. D.—1949 yards. The Chicago Bears, who have run hot and cold recently, are second with 1937 yards.

With his sad record of only four passes completed Sunday, Slingin' Sammy Baugh has given over the aerial championship to the Bears' Johnny Lujack, who now has 71 completions in 127 tosses. The New York Giants' Chuck Conerly also passed Baugh, hurling his fifty-third good one in 99 tries.

Redskin defenses have yielded an awful aggregate of 160 points, more than 30 a game, to be the most run-through passed-over outfit in the league.

Maybe the Redskins could improve on these statistics by adopting a plan submitted by C. P. Rice, a Redskin fan of 2849 Belair pl. ne., who came up yesterday with an offensive formation which combines "the deception of the straight T, the power of the single wing, the short side attack of the punt formation, in addition to the quick-kick threat."

Mr. Rice calls his new system the "offset T."

Leahy Too Expensive, Says George Marshall

"Frank Leahy makes more money than the President of the United States. We couldn't pay him enough."

That was the answer of George Marshall, president of the Washington Redskins, to a question whether the Notre Dame coach would be offered the job of running the local pros if and when Billick Whelchel, their present coach, is fired or quits.

Leo DeOrsey, a Redskin stockholder, is a personal friend and the tax attorney of Notre Dame's T-formation expert.

Lafayette May Prove Tough One for GW

Clipper Smith's Boys Better Than Record Shows

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S attempt to reach the .500 mark before Friday night's Homecoming crowd at Griffith Stadium will have to be over the prone bodies of a Lafayette team that beat the Colonials last year, 33-14.

The Leopards, who have won only one, are much more dangerous than their record indicates. Under Maurice (Clipper) Smith for the first time, Lafayette gave Princeton and Syracuse good battles before succumbing.

It beat Muhlenberg but was surprised last week by Delaware, 7-0. That Delaware defeat should make GW's task more difficult.

Lafayette held Delaware to 11 yards from scrimmage and two first downs. Meanwhile the Leopards made a dozen first downs and 150 yards on the ground. They lost the game on a forward pass.

In Philadelphia yesterday, Smith, former Villanova and Boston Yanks coach, was bemoaning high scores. "These 67-7 scores are crazy," he said, "I am coming to the conclusion that wholesale scoring is unfair to the game. It's getting to be throw ball."

CHANCES ARE Clipper, the old Notre Damer, won't be too critical if his Leopards get going against GW.

His offensive hopes rest on the passing arm of Frank Downing and the running of Fullback Gordon Fleming. Downing, one of the East's leading passers last season, has been having trouble getting away his tosses and is due to break loose.

Lafayette also plans to experiment with several sophs in the backfield. Jack Savage, Mike Coady and George Reilly have been impressive defensively, the Leopards are strong. Their showing against Delaware indicates that.

Lafayette's 102-man band also is coming along to lend encouragement.

THREAT TO GW—Frank Downing (above) will quarterback the Lafayette College 11 against George Washington University at Griffith Stadium Friday night in GW's homecoming game.

Carnera, Barnard Top Show Tonight

It will be Primo Carnera, former world's heavyweight boxing champion, against Barney Barnard, a former jungle training expert and instructor in judo for the Army during World War II, in tonight's feature wrestling bout at Joe Turner's Arena.

Marvin Mercer, Lancaster, Pa., will meet Lou Bernardi of Los Angeles, in the semiwindup. Chief Yaqui, the Oklahoma Indian, will oppose Harry Finkelstein, of Brooklyn. Other bouts, first at 8:45, find Laverne Baxter meeting Artie Kruskamp and George Macricostas tackling Monsieur Paris.

Facts on GW Homecoming

The George Washington-Lafayette football game at 8:30 p. m. Friday in Griffith stadium will be the focal spot of the Homecoming weekend for the G street school.

Homecoming opens with a pep rally at noon Friday in Lisner Auditorium. During halftime at the game the fraternities and sororities will stage a Mummers parade.

The alumni luncheon will be held at 12:30 Saturday in the Mayflower Hotel with the football team as honored guests. Speaker will be Maj. Gen. Patrick Hurley.

Miss Homecoming will be chosen from a group of 22 candidates at 3 p. m. in the Student Union Building Saturday. The Homecoming Ball, that evening, will be held in the Armory, from 9 'til 1 with music by Eliott Lawrence and his band. Miss Homecoming will be crowned as the highlight of the evening.

Papit Still Leads Nation In Rushing

Johnny Papit of the University of Virginia still leads the Nation's backs in yards gaained rushing—In fact, he stretched his lead during the past weekend.

Against V. M. I. last Saturday, Rapid Johnny gained 157 yards. Drake's Johnny Bright, second, picked up only 133 against St. Louis. Papit's yardage totals 774 in 104 tries for a 7.6 average.

Bright leads the Nation in total offense with 1411 yards. In third place is William and Mary's Buddy Lex with 1032. Papit is tenth with 774.

George Washington's Andy Davis is eleventh with 745, and Navy's Bob Zastrow is eighteenth with 684.

Lex holds ninth place in the Nation in passing with 54 completions in 104 passes for 7 touchdowns. V. M. I.'s Joe Veltri is twentieth with 37 for 76 and 5 touchdowns scored.

Kramer Beats Pancho Gonzales

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—Jack Kramer defeated Richard (Pancho) Gonzales, 6—4, 3—6, 6—3, 6—2, at Madison Square Garden tonight in a tennis match that launched the professional career of the California-born Mexican who succeeded Kramer as national amateur champ.

Frank Parker, also in his debut, lost to Pancho Segura, 6—3, 6—4.

Gonzales was clearly the favorite with the crowd of 13,357 but the 21-year-old husky from the public courts of Los Angeles lacked the all-around game to cope with the court-wise Kramer, at least in their initial meeting.

Rickey Interested In Glenn Davis

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—Branch Rickey, boss of the Brooklyn Dodgers, admitted today that he was interested in Lieut. Glenn Davis as an outfielder, but he refused comment on reports he had offered the one-time Army football star a $40,000 bonus to sign up.

Davis, backfield coach of the Army plebes, said yesterday he had talked with several baseball officials about a possible professional career after he is eligible for discharge next June.

Western Maryland Beats American, 4-0

Westminster, Md., Oct. 25 (AP).—Bob Kittels booted three goals today to pace Western Maryland to a 4-0 victory over American University in a Mason-Dixon Conference soccer game.

It was American U.'s fourth straight conference loss

Middlecoff to Sign

Memphis, Oct. 25 (AP).—Open Champion Cary Middlecoff, Memphis' golfing dentist, expects to sign as pro at the famed Ormond Hotel and Country Club at Ormond Beach, Fla., his manager Early Maxwell said today.

Riot Squad at Tackle

Terps' Ray Krouse Player of Week

He Is Biggest Reason Maryland High on Defense

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

MARYLAND is the Nation's third leading defensive team and Tackle Ray Krouse is the chief reason the Terrapins enjoy that distinction.

Playing with his right hand encased in a cast from his fingertips to almost his elbow, Krouse was a one-man riot against North Carolina State last Saturday.

Three times the fired up Wolfpack barged to within the Maryland ten-yard line but each time Krouse turned them back almost single-handedly. They finally managed to score but had to do it on a pass.

Krouse, a 240-pounder who was a sensation at Western High School and later Devitt Prep, is no Johnie-come lately defensive standout for the Terps. He has played consistently good football for three years, but this year he seems to have hit his peak.

AGAINST Michigan State two weeks ago, Krouse played opposite the strong side of Michigan State's unbalanced line and in nine running plays against him, the power-packed Spartans have yet to gain yardage worthy of mention.

"Best tackle I've seen in years," commented Coach Biggie Munn of Michigan State, an All-American lineman himself at Michigan 25 years ago.

Another testimonial on Krouse's behalf came from Frank Leahy of Notre Dame who wired Coach Jim Tatum of Maryland after the Michigan State game: "Our scouts tremendously impressed by your tremendous tackle, Ray Krouse."

Coach Bo Rowland of George Washington, who watched the Maryland-N. C. State game, shook his head in sympathy every time the Wolfpack tried to run through Krouse.

"Trying to gain against him is like sticking your head in a meat grinder", said Rowland.

RAY KROUSE
On way to all-America

Krouse Guest Of Jim Gibbons

Ray Krouse, giant Maryland tackle and College Player of The Week, will be guest on Sportscaster Jim Gibbons' television show (WMAL, channel 7,) tonight at 7:15 o'clock. Movies of the Maryland-North Carolina State will be shown with Krouse in action

Terps Plan Big Doings

Three thousand alumni are expected to turn out for the twenty-sixth annual homecoming celebration at the University of Maryland this weekend.

Prominent guests will include Gov. William Preston Lane, and Senators Millard E. Tydings and Herbert O'Conor.

A parade, with over 20 floats entered by campus fraternities and sororities will start at 11 a. m. Homecoming queen candiates will be included in the parade.

The highlight of the afternoon, the Terp-South Carolina Gamecock game starts at 2:15 p. m. and the homecoming queen will be crowned during the halftime intermission. Bands from both Maryland and South Carolina will be there.

The music of Jimmy Dorsey and his band will be featured at the homecoming dance that evening, starting at 8 p. m. in the new armory.

A Friday night pep rally, at 6:45, will precede the big day. Harry Gilmer, Redskin quarterback, will be the featured speakers.

Bill Bennings . . .

AT PIMLICO

DEAR FOLKS:

With Eddie Arcaro, Steve Brooks, Doug Dodson, Willie Boland and others on the scene, Maryland's jockey colony is on the upswing. The rider who pilots the winner of Friday's Pimlico special will be taking the race for the first time. Ted Atkinson will handle Capot while Brooks will be aboard Coaltown. Arcaro has won the race four times with Challedon (1939), Shut Out, Assault and Citation. George Woolf won three before he died as the result of a California spill. His winners were Seabiscuit, Challedon (1940) and Whirlaway. This track has a better grade of horses than Laurel had but it remained for a Charles Town steed to win the opening race of the meeting. See you on the rail. BILL

Pilate Sires Winners of $615 Double

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Pimlico, Md., Oct. 25.—Opening day at the old hilltop track here was not an ordinary day at the races for a number of reasons, to wit:

1. Brookmeade Stable's Blue Hills set a new track record in winning the $7500 added Governor Bowie Handicap.

2. The fifth race developed a minus pool in the show betting costing the Maryland Jockey Club $727.80.

3. Miss Virginia Fitzgerald's Gay Pilate led all the way in the first race and paid a $205 win mutuel.

4. There was a $615 daily double pay-off when Brookmeade's Pilayya won the second race at an $11 mutuel.

5. Pilate was the sire of the winners of both ends of the daily double, an oddity if not a record.

6. No tickets were sold on the Gay Pilate—Lillian Clarke combination in the daily double pool.

7. Two horses went lame in the steeplechase but no jockeys were hurt despite the big, cheap field.

8. Despite the fact it rained all day, the track became faster instead of slower as the card progressed.

Jockey Eddie Arcaro was in the saddle as Blue Hills came through with a stretch drive that carried him to victory in the Governor Bowie. The 3-year-old forged into the wire a length in front of H. L. Straus' Pilaster. Third in the field of six was C. E. Tuttle's Double Brandy.

Blue Hills, a son of Blue Larkspur, operated in the role of a $3.80 favorite and was clocked in 2:55 2/5 for the mile and six furlongs, knocking a fifth of a second off the mark set by Pilaster in the same race last year.

Gasparilla set most of the pace, lost some of his punch by running out along the backstretch and then tired badly. Blue Hills took the lead when Gasparilla faltered and held on gamely in front of the challenging Pilaster. Double Brandy was a tiring third after being well placed throughout.

The Calumet entry of Fervent and Flying Disc, along with Shamrock Stable's Little Hard, caused the minus pool by being in the money along with the winner, W. G. Jones' Winter Wheat, in the fifth race.

Winter Wheat, ridden by Bobby Martin, paid $10.40 and ran the six furlongs in 1.10 3/5 only two fifths over the track record held by The Pincher.

If Lillian Clarke had won the second race, the daily double pool, according to the rules, would have been distributed to those customers who held daily double tickets with Gay Pilate, the first race winner.

Rams Worry Georgetown

Scout Prendergast Warns of Power

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

JACK PRENDERGAST, Georgetown end coach and scout, is plenty worried about the Fordham team the Hoyas meet at the Polo Grounds Saturday . . . Calls the Rams better than any team Georgetown has beaten in its surprising 4-1 beginning . . . It didn't look that way at the start of the season but right now the New York game looms as a big one . . . It won't be surprising if the collegians surpass last Sunday's pro crowds in Gotham . . . The Yanks-Forty-Niners drew 36,197; Giants-Bears drew 30,587.

It's the only college game on tap and New York is hungry for a good Fordham team . . . The New York papers still are talking about the 47-21 thumping of Syracuse, Fordham's biggest post-war triumph . . . At one stage, the unbeaten Rams led, 47-7 . . . Georgetown's upset of Boston College is helping, too . . . That one was caught on television in the Greater New York area.

Add unsung heroes: Georgetown Guard Lou Becker . . . On Boston College's opening touchdown march, Guards Bob Fortunato and Paul Wintermeyer were carried off the field . . . Becker, Baltimore soph, stepped into the unfamiliar left guard spot and played a fine game . . .

DICK HAESLER'S winning field goal against B. C. wasn't a surprise to early arrivals . . . In practice he booted 15 straight from the 20-yard line he found the ball for his big kick . . . Dartmouth Line Coach Johnny Dell Isola called him the best college placekicker he'd seen in a long time . . . So Haesler went out and made Dell Isola look good . . .

Harvard's football team may not be much but its band is tremendous . . . It has so many men, it had no trouble spelling out Dartmouth last Saturday . . . Despite a solemn warning in the program that goalpost fights are beneath the dignity of Harvard and Dartmouth men, a terrific one was waged after the game . . . It followed the pattern of the football contest . . . The south goal went down quickly, but when darkness fell the grim Harvards still protected the north goal from wild Dartmouth assaults . . .

Collegians Could Outdraw Pros

Although the Fenway Park lights could be seen from Soldiers Field, the Ivy Leaguers wouldn't deign to give the Boston U.-New York U. score late in the last quarter . . . Maryland will be a stern opponent for bowl-ambitious B. U. . . . Mt. St. Mary's meets Catholic U. here Saturday and brings the most achy-named coach Sing Sing ever had—John Law . . . The old Notre Dame" coached the prisoners in 1932 when Alabama Pitts was all the rage . .

Really Rugged Lives Up to His Name in Show

Harrisburg, Pa., Oct. 25 (AP).—A horse that lived up to its name—Really Rugged—won the first championship of the 1949 Pennsylvania National Horse Show today.

Really Rugged turned in a blue ribbon performance in copping the $250 stake for his class. A first-place triumph in that class gave the horse seven points for a total of 13 during the show.

Runner-up in the stake was Leading Edge, a big chestnut gelding shown by Mrs. T. Kenneth Ellis, Hot Springs, Va. Leading Edge also ended up as reserve champion in the class with 10½ points.

Brooklyn Rollers Beat D. C. Team

With Capt. Midge (Tuffy) Brasuhn on her good behavior the Brooklyn Bombers snapped a three-game winning streak of the Washington - Baltimore Wildcats, 18-12, in another action-packed Roller Derby game last night at Uline Arena before 1377.

The 11-game Wildcat-Bomber series enters its seventh night of competition tonight at 8:30 at Uline's with the Wildcats leading, four games to two. The belligerent Tuffy spent only two minutes in the penalty box (a record for her).

Four Kentuckians Start for Stars

Chicago, Oct. 25 (AP).—Four fifths of Kentucky's N. C. A. A. title team may start against the Minneapolis Lakers tomorrow night in the tenth annual all-star basketball game at the Chicago Stadium.

Collegiate Coach Adolph Rupp has Alex Groza, Ralph Beard, Wallace Jones and Cliff Barker from his brilliant Wildcat quintet of last season.

Bill Corum May Get Winn Job

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 25 (AP).—A Churchill Downs spokesman said today the board of directors probably will name a successor Friday to the late Col. Matt J. Winn as president of the American Turf Association and president of Churchill Downs.

Sources here have speculated the job will be given to Bill Corum, New York sports writer and longtime friend of Winn.

Joey Maxim KO's Kahut in Cincinnati

Cincinnati, Oct. 25 (AP).—Joey Maxim of Cleveland, 182½, scored a technical knockout over Joe Kahut, 188, Portland, Oreg., here tonight when the city boxing commission doctor refused to all the Westerner to answer the bell for the fifth round. Between rounds Kathut's seconds were unable to stop what the physician called "a temporal hemorrhage."

Blades Lead County League

The newly organized Prince Georges County Football League has really been playing some bang-up football considering that the six high schools are fielding teams for the first time.

Bladensburg leads the league with two wins and no defeats. Fullback Mickey Heard, a crushing 175-pounder, spearheads the Blades' attack but gets able assistance from Paul Magtutu, who handles most of the passing chores. Cal Green is making quite a name for himself in the league as an alert defensive back.

He recovered two Hyattsville fumbles in the game last week to set up both of the Bladensburg scores.

Bladensburg won that gamt 12-6.

Mount Rainier, a dark horse in league calculations, has lost one game, a 7-6 defeat by Maryland Park.

Bay Teeming With Large Rockfish

By Ralph Murdock

THE BAY IS literally teeming with tremendous schools of pan size rockfish from Bloody Point to Cove Point. Trollers, using all white Lusby lures and No. 14 pet spoons, are averaging 35 of this species per boat.

Murdock

Anglers who are fortunate to procure grass shrimp are doing even better by chumming. We saw one catch of 87 which included some that hit the three pound mark.

The whoppers are now striking with greater regularity. A catch of eight hefties which weighed from five to 14½ pounds was taken a mile off the Chesapeake Beach shore. The party consisted of Doctor Weems, Mrs. Wesley Stinnett and Capt. Bill Hubbard.

They proved that the big ones bite better near dusk. The anglers did not leave the pier until 4:30 in the afternoon. They trolled through the first school of fish they sighted and made their haul just at sundown.

Skipper Hubbard said, "We were fishing in less than 20 feet of water and were using a number 17 pet spoon with a white feather attached."

They fished from the Bonnie B which is owned by Doctor Weems. Mrs. Stinnett, who fishes practically every day when the water is not rough, hooked and landed the big one, the 14½ pounder. It was taken on a steel line with a two ounce sinker after a lengthy struggle.

CAPTAIN HUBBARD, who fished the day before at Sharp's Light, said he saw several stripers caught which broke the 25 pound mark. He adds, "We missed out on the hardheads this year, but a good rockfish season is practically assured, judging from the big fish which are now in the bay.

Mr. and Mrs. William R. Lusby had the banner catch of 40 rock which weighed up to two pounds. They were taken near Breezy Point from an 18-foot boat. The "missus" nabbed 26 of the 40 with an all white polar bear hair lure with no sinker.

It's the best method when the fish are feeding on the surface. The Lusbys are experts on rock trolling and were using the lures which bear their name.

New System of U. S. Job Allocations Explained by Author

The one major change in the classification bill now before the President is a new system of job allocations, its author said last night.

"Day-by-day job allocations in the agencies are the proving ground for the new bill. Under it, we are given the discretion to do a good job, and unless we use it properly the Congress is sure to pass another bill to tie our hands."

So spoke Ismar Baruch, chief of Civil Service's classification division, at a meeting last night of the Society for Personnel Administration attended by 1500 Federal employes and officials, in the Departmental Auditorium.

Baruch said there was every expectation the President would sign the bill into law in a day or so and it would become effective no later than Sunday. About 175,000 Government employes here and nearby will benefit by it.

The speaker, who wrote the main provisions of the bill, said it was never intended to be a pay-raise measure. "It is aimed," he explained, "to relieve the pressure in the top grades by raising the salary ceiling, and to bring about a closer relationship between jobs and salaries."

He warned that employes who believe it is a pay-raise bill will be disappointed when they get their first pay checks under it. Salaries are boosted from $7.20 to $290.50 a year, or an average of $140.50 under the bill.

The classification chief described the highlights of the new job allocation system provided in the bill as follows:

(1) The Civil Service Commission is made responsible for publication of classification standards for each grade; (2) the agencies are compelled to comply with these standards; (3) the agencies are given authority to make their own job allocations up through GS-15 ($10,000 to $11,000) and the allocations to determine whether agency heads approve them; (4) Civil Service must spot-audit the alocations to determine whether its standards are followed, and (5) the commission is given power to suspend in whole or part the authority of any agency to make job allocations if it abuses the right.

Baruch pointed out there are 885,000 classified jobs—82 percent in the field service, and 18 percent here. The system will apply to all of them. The commission has had very little to do with salaries and grades of employes in the field service. The bill is likely to result in grade and salary adjustments for thousands of employes.

Any classified worker will have the right to appeal his job allocation under the bill. The appeal must be made to Civil Service.

Baruch repeatedly warned the agency classification people in his audience they have a major responsibility to carry out the bill. The measure will put the Civil Service Commission in a strong position to crack down on agencies that fail to do a good classification job.

Regulations and circulars on the bill will be released as soon as the President signs it, the classification chief said. Between 20,000 and 25,000 jobs will be placed under the classification system by the bill, Baruch said, and agencies will be asked to recommend covering-in dates. The commission has six months to bring them in. Jobs in RFC, housing agencies and the Immigration and Naturalization Service are among those to be affected.

A second circular, Baruch said, will call for agency recommendations for those to be assigned to the three top grades—the "elite 400." In addition, the agencies will be required to send a list of all similar jobs to the Civil Service Commission to prevent the agencies from playing favorites.

The commission, Baruch explained, must "pre-audit" jobs before they can be allocated to GS-16 ($11,200 to $12,000) and GS-17 ($12,000 to $13,000). Acting on Civil Service recommendations, the President must approve all jobs in GS-18 ($14,000). The Congress limited GS-16 to 300 jobs; GS-17 to 75, and GS-18 to 25, hence the "elite 400."

Baruch said the 3800 clerical-mechanical group in the Bureau of Engraving & Printing here was the only large one taken out from under the classification system. These employes' salaries will be fixed by the Treasury wage board, which has already begun a study of their wages.

New Pace Is Set By Advance Gifts Chest Drive Unit

Group 'Well Ahead' Of Last Campaign; Solicitors Begin Ringing Doorbells

Community Chest workers in the advance gifts section met at lunch yesterday to see how they were getting along, and found out that they were getting along very well indeed.

Contributions in this department so far this year seem to be "well ahead" of similar gifts made this time last year, according to William H. Bartlett, manager of the advance gifts-general unit.

Mrs. Frank J. Luchs reported one subscription alone represented a sixfold increase over the amount contributed by that individual a year ago.

Actual figures on advance gifts subscriptions in this year's campaign will be made public at the first general report luncheon of the campaign Monday at 12:30 p. m. at the Washington Hotel.

The advance gifts section of the campaign supplements work of other groups, covering mainly those who qualify for membership in the Red Feather Century Club by giving $100 or more during the campaign.

Yesterday also was kickoff day for efforts of volunteer solicitors, who began ringing doorbells at Washington homes despite inclement weather. In all, approximately 2000 persons are in this group as members of residential units.

'Proserpine'

Ex-Newsman Reads Poem, Hangs Self

With a book nearby opened to a melancholy poem on death, the body of Ambrose Emmet Collier, 45, a former Washington newspaper correspondent was found hanged yesterday.

Collier

It was in a room at the Harris Hotel, 17 Massachusetts ave. nw., where he had registered October 12. Two notes, one to a brother and one to his daughter, lay nearby.

Gallinger Hospital Ambulance Dr. Marian McLean, who pronounced him dead, said the poem was Swinburne's "Garden of Proserpine," one verse reading:

"I am tired of tears and laughter,
And men that laugh and weep;
Of what may come hereafter
For men that sow and reap;
I am weary of days and hours,
Blown buds of barren flowers,
Desires and dreams and powers
And everything but sleep."

Dr. McLean told detectives that when she was in college, an English professor had said this poem should be suppressed because so many persons read it and then take their own lives.

Homicide squad detectives said they were informed Collier at one time was a correspondent here for papers in New York, Florida, Kentucky and West Virginia, and also had worked in the office of a Kentucky Congressman.

The Congressional Directory for June, 1933, listed Collier as correspondent here for the Charleston (W. Va.) Gazette, Wheeling Register, Lexington (Ky.) Leader, St. Petersburg (Fla.) Times, and the West Palm Beach Post.

In 1933, he was sentenced to 30 months in a Federal penitentiary for passing counterfeit money in Alexandria.

His brother, John F. Collier, 8710 Cameron st., Silver Spring, said he was not aware Ambrose Collier was in the city. He said he had last heard his brother was ill in Chicago, six weeks ago.

The second note was addressed to Ambrose Collier's daughter, Claire Stahl, 16, who lives with Collier's former wife at 1401 Columbia rd. nw. She got a divorce from him in 1936 because of his penitentiary sentence. It was the first one granted in the District after moral turpitude conviction was made a ground for such actions. She has remarried.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide.

Besides his brother and daughter here, Mr. Collier is survived by two other brothers and two sisters in Chicago, and a sister in Gillett, Wis.

Montgomery Diners Hear Lane at Chest 'Kickoff'

No community can afford to be without social and character-building agencies, Gov. William Preston Lane, jr., of Maryland, said last night.

Governor Lane spoke at Montgomery County's first "kickoff" dinner in the Community Chest campaign at Congressional Country Club, Potomac, Md. The dinner was attended by State and county officials as well as Community Chest and council leaders in the county. Montgomery County's quota for the campaign is $136,004.

Other speakers were Frederic P. Lee, president of the Montgomery County Council; Frank J. Luchs, general chairman of the Washington area chest campaign, and James Mitchell, chairman of the Montgomery County campaign.

Bold Baloney Bandit Cuts 2 More Slices

The bold baloney bandit struck again last nigth for his fourth and fifth successful robberies of food marts in three days.

In last night's forays, he used an ice-pick at one place, and a large knife at another to menace his victims.

The man, described as a tall, lanky Negro, first entered the Rainbow Market, 520 Florida ave. nw., and ordered baloney, as in three robberies Sunday. When Benny Lerner, 35, proprietor, turned to serve him, the bandit brandished the ice-pick, knocked down Harry Pasternak, 69, Lerner's father-in-law, hit the 1-cent key on the cash register, and fled with $30.

Later, five blocks away, he entered the Florida Cafe, 14 Florida ave. nw., and was refused a drink by Samuel Greenfield, the proprietor. He pushed Greenfield and a waitress aside, and in the presence of 20 customers, took $35 from the cash register.

Sunday's victims were the West End Delicatessen, 2007 M st. nw.; Goldberg's Grocery, 2032 12th st. nw., and the grocery of Mrs. Vasilike Garoufes, 2535 14th st. nw. Robbed within four hours, they yielded up some $172.

Lawyers, Doctors Get Together At Long Last

The Mutual relations committees of the District Bar and Medical Associations at long last got together yesterday over a luncheon table.

The two committees met at the Iron Gate Inn, 1734 N. st. nw., in introductory session, according to their chairmen, Lawyer Nicholas Chase and Dr. Winfred Overholser. One result of the meeting, they said, may be a joint membership meeting of both associations early next year.

Though both associations have annually chosen committees to deal with each other the committees apparently served in name only, it was recently reported. One member of the law group disclosed the state of affairs at a meeting of the lawyers—and the report was picked up by the newspapers.

Yesterday's meeting was Dutch treat, and closed to the press.

Woman Critically Hurt by Bus From Which She Had Alighted

She is Mrs. Alice M. Cogar, 45, wife of Marvin Cogar, of 5107 Baltimore blvd., Hyattsville.

The bus, owned by Safeway Trails, Inc., of the Trailways bus system, was driven by Norman Gallar Thompson, 40, of 5407 2nd st. nw. He told police that Mrs. Cogar and about seven other passengers had left the bus and passed in front of it. He said because the windshield was high and Mrs. Cogar short, he did not see her, and started the bus.

The victim's sister-in-law, Mrs. Catherine Cogar, 5223 42d pl., Hyattsville, told police she heard the victim scream, then called to Thompson to stop the vehicle, which he did. A man crawled underneath the bus and calmed Mrs. Cogar, while Thompson backed the bus from above them. Mrs. Catherine Cogar said her sister-in-law is only 5 feet tall.

The Branchville Rescue Squad took Mrs. Cogar to Prince Georges General Hospital at Cheverly. It was reported there that she suffered a possible fracture of the skull and back, a fractured right arm, and head cuts. She was reported in critical condition.

At Arlington Hospital, Ernest F. Snyder, of Manassas, Va., died yesterday of injuries suffered in an auto accident on October 16. The accident occurred on Virginia, Route 211, about four miles east of Centreville, Va., when a pickup truck in which Snyder and two others rode went off the highway and down an embankment. The others were slightly injured.

D. C. Spending Brakes Urged By Budget Chief

$8.5 Million Added By Last Session of Congress; Fowler Warns of Tax Hike

By Richard Lyons
Post Reporter

District Budget Officer Walter L. Fowler yesterday urged a slowdown on legislation that adds to District spending.

In a letter to the Commissioners, Fowler pointed out that legislation enacted in the session of Congress just ended will add $8,504,267 to the District budget for the fiscal year beginning next July 1.

"If we are to avoid further increases in taxation," wrote the budget officer, "now is the time to think about adjusting 'brakes'."

A small portion of the new spending required by Congress, $311,442, will not recur in the budget after next year, Fowler said.

To Be Fixed Part

But the overwhelming share, $8,192,825, will become a fixed part of future budgets. In fact, he told reporters, these expenses, which consist largely of pay raises, will increase each year.

Fowler observed that in the past decade the number of persons on the District payroll has increased by 35 percent—from 13,572 in 1939 to 18,380 today. In that period, the payroll itself jumped from $27 million to more than $60 million.

"I have to express the hope," Fowler said, "that everyone is fairly happy now, and that there will be no need for beneficial legislation for some time. If we could have several sabbatical years and proceed to scrutinize legislation now existing for the purpose of revision or repeal, we would be headed for financial stability."

Fowler, whose office is now trying to prepare a balanced budget for next year, told reporters his remarks were not made in criticism of Congress or the Commissioners or the people. "We're saying only that we must slow down on spending or face an increase in tax rates," Fowler stated.

Acts by Congress

Acts passed by Congress this year that will affect the District's budget were listed as Fowler as follows:

Recurring: Pay increases to teachers, policemen and firemen ($330), $3,285,000; pay increases to classified employes ($330), $2,876,000; revision of Classification Act, $1,200,000; increased pensions to widows of policemen and firemen, $345,900; sick leave for teachers, $160,000; increased allowance for injured employes, $77,000; additional Circuit and District judges, $65,000; additional Municipal Court judges, $60,000.

Increased jurors' fees, $45,000; increased salaries for judges of Municipal Court and Municipal Court of Appeals, $39,925; amendment to Teachers Salary Act, $22,000; leave for part-time employes, $15,000; increased subsistence and mileage allowance, $2000.

Nonrecurring: Retroactive pay for retired policemen and firemen, $189,000; day-care centers, $100,000; additional Juvenile Court judge, $10,305; private relief bills, $10,337; exemption from taxation, National Society of Colonial Dames of America, $1800.

Symbol Chosen

D. C. Board Will Assist With Sesqui

Sesquicentennial officials yesterday received pledges of full cooperation from the District Commissioners in their plans for Washington's big 150th anniversary celebration next year.

"Freedom"

At the same time, the fete officials announced the symbol of the celebration will be based on the Statue of Freedom atop the Capitol dome.

One problem, forecast as a difficulty of possibly major proportions, evaporated when discussed by the Sesqui planners and the District government heads in a conference.

This was the question whether the proposed location of a new bridge over the Anacostia River might conflict with the site picked for the "Freedom Fair," a central feature of the Sesqui

Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, District Engineer Commissioner, stilled the issue with the assurance that any problems involving the bridge and Freedom Fair site could readily be ironed out.

Cox Liaison Officer

In line with his declaration, Lieut. Col. L. E. Cox, assistant District engineer commissioner, was formally appointed liaison officer between the District Government and the Sesquicentennial Commission.

In announcing Cox's appointment, officials said his assignment would be to cooperate fully in all engineering aspects of the Freedom Fair project.

Among those present for the conference were General Young, Commissioner John Russell Young, president of the Board of District Commissioners and also a member of the Sesqui board; Carter Barron, executive vice chairman of the board, and Edward Boykin, Sesqui director.

Housing to Be Moved

In another development, officials of the Public Housing Authority also gave assurances of cooperation with Sesqui officials in developing plans to take care of 61 temporary units of war housing set up for Negro families in the section of Anacostia Park to be used for the fair.

PHA officials said the housing units were put up in 1944 and 1945 south of Benning rd. The agency has been selling similar units located on private, leased land on condition the buyers move them. No official request from the Sesqui-Commission for a decision on the park housing has been received by PHA, its officials said, and the details of the decision will be worked out after such a request is made.

The Anacostia River Bridge question may come in for further discussion today in a conference between Sesqui officials and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. The NCPPC has favored locating the proposed bridge in line with Massachusetts ave. se.

Congress Heights Parents Ask For 2 New Elementary Schools

More than a hundred parents of children attending the Congress Heights Elementary School yesterday called for construction of two new elementary schools in the Congress Heights area.

The school's Parent-Teacher Association unanimously indorsed a report of the president, Mrs. Kenneth Glennon, which said that two schools are needed if full time schooling is to be provided for all children. The two schools would be in addition to the Abram Simon School shortly to go under construction at 4th st. and Mississippi ave. se.

Mrs. Glennon said she will appeal to the Board of Education to seek funds for the schools from the Commissioners and Congress.

The board's budget request for next year includes funds to purchase sites for the two schools but not construction money.

The members voted to seek funds for the new schools rather than support a proposal that the school board provide bus transportation for the children from the crowded Congress Heights School to vacant classrooms elsewhere in the city.

Mrs. Jack Schooler, 556 Lebaum st. se., urged members to reconsider their decision to oppose bus transportation or to seek some other temporary measure of providing full-time schooling while new buildings are under construction.

At present 626 children at the Congress Heights School and 733 children at the nearby Patterson Elementary School are attending classes half-time because of a shortage of classroom space.

Mrs. Schooler said that the P-TA should renew its interest in the use of neighborhood church facilities or seek immediate construction of temporary buildings.

Discrimination Suit Judge Sees Schools

Federal Judge Albert V. Bryan inspected Arlington County's Negro and white high schools yesterday in connection with a trial in which Negro students charge racial discrimination.

Accompanied by lawyers from both sides, the Alexandria United States District Court jurist visited Washington-Lee High School for white pupils and Hoffman-Boston School for Negro pupils, to study conditions.

In court, the quality and quantity of facilities offered to Arlington County Negro students at the Manassas Regional High School were debated.

Testimony in the action brought by three Negro students against the Arlington County School Board, charging discrimination in provision of educational facilities, was completed in midafternoon. Summary arguments will begin today.

$200,000 for Improvements

The final witness, R. Worth Peters, superintendent of schools in Prince William County, and in charge of the Manassas Regional High School, said that almost $200,000 has been spent in two years to improve the Manassas school, which provides courses not available at local schools for students from four Virginia counties.

Peters said about $160,000 of this amount was for construction of a new shop building and the remainder for repairs and expansion of equipment, with some of this still being delivered. His testimony supplemented other evidence of a recent stepup in improvement of facilities.

Simon L. Alsop, mechanics instructor at the school, said 24 drawing tables were delivered in the past two weeks. The stools arrived yesterday, Peters added.

Attorneys for the plaintiffs tried to show that equipment for teaching auto mechanics is inadequate. Alsop admitted the school has no motor analyzer, engines, valve grinders, armature lathes, chain hoists, battery chargers or speedometers, but declared his students were beginners and did not yet require such facilities.

Earlier, Principal C. N. Bennett testified no courses are offered in business mathematics, bookkeeping, economics, solid geometry, trigorometry, Latin, instrumental music or shop mathematics. He said these could be taught if there were sufficient demand.

Procrastination Charged

Martin A. Martin attorney for the plaintiffs, asked whether white children are forced to make demands in order to obtain various coures. County Superintendent of Schools William A. Early replied that many courses were the result of requests by white students.

Martin charged "procrastination" in providing courses for Negro students, and asked whether the courses are intended "for them or their grandchildren."

Plaintiff Peggy Council testified she had vainly requested courses in Latin and chemistry at Hoffman-Boston as preparation for a nursing career.

"At the rate I am going now," she said, "it doesn't look like I will be able to take nursing. I haven't got it (Latin) now and it doesn't look like I am going to get it."

Dr. William Henry Barnes, former principal of the school, said he had studied the Washington-Lee vocational program, recommended by the State board of education as a model, and had asked for similar improvement at Manassas. He said his request was tabled August 15, when he resigned.

Dr. Barnes, now education chairman at Wilberforce University in Ohio, said Manassas staff members were dissatisfied with pay scales. He said these were geared to Prince William scales, rather than the higher ones paid in Arlington, Fairfax and Loudoun Counties, which also send students to the school.

J. Ruppert Picott, executive secretary, Virginia State Teachers Association, said his inspection showed a clear inferiority in facilities at Manassas, as compared with the Washington-Lee High School equipment.

An argument made Monday by Dr. Howard A. Dawson, National Education Association official, and Mrs. Edmund D. Campbell, vice-chairman of the Arlington School Board, that a small school like Hoffman-Boston offered advantages over a larger one in the personal attention possible, was challenged by Dr. Martin D. Jenkins, president of Morgan University, Baltimore.

Truman Signs Bills for 3 New D. C. Judges

President Truman yesterday signed the bill adding three judges to Municipal Court here.

The new law boosts from 10 to 13 the number of Municipal Court judges. The White House said the President had given no indication when or whether he would make recess appointments to the three jobs. He told his press conference last week he would disclose his plans about Municipal Court recess appointments after signing the bill.

Permanent appointments to the three judgeships require Senate confirmation.

Five other measures signed by the President would:

1. Exempt from District taxation the personal property in the headquarters building of the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution here.

2. Waive the District residence requirement for membership in the commission on mental health.

3. Authorize issuance of a District chiropractor's license to Abraham J. Ehrlich.

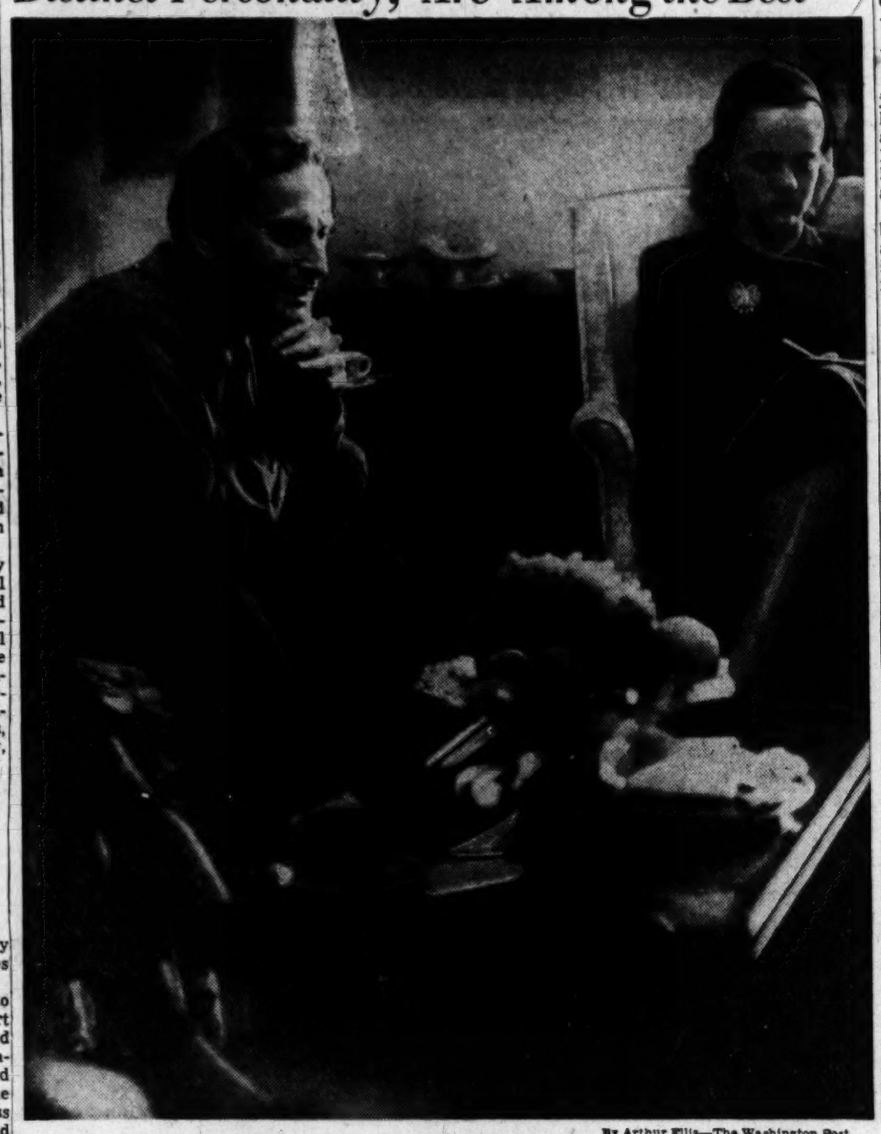
4. Give an additional 90 days, running from yesterday, for payment of claims to Eastern ave. property owners for expenses they incurred as the result of widening the street.

5. Authorize the commission on renovation of the Executive Mansion to prepare a plan for disposing of materials removed from the White House during its remodeling. The plan would be cleared with the President, and put into effect with his approval.

Catholic U. Alumni Dance

The Washington Chapter of the Catholic University Alumni Association has invited all alumni and alumnae and their friends to a Halloween frolic at the Wardman Park tonight at 9 o'clock. Stan Brown's band will play for dancing and 50 prizes will be awarded.

Menuhin Says Washington Audiences Have 'Distinct Personality,' Are 'Among the Best'



By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post

Over early morning coffee cups, Yehudi Menuhin talks to the press in his Raleigh Hotel suite

By Paul Hume

"There are probably fewer gloves at concerts in Washington these days than when I first played here 20 years ago," Yehudi Menuhin said yesterday in his suite at the Raleigh Hotel.

The celebrated violinist was getting ready for his rehearsal with the National Symphony Orchestra for tonight's opening concert. "Washington audiences are less inhibited and have acquired a distinct personality in the last two decades," Menuhin went on. "They are now among the best audiences in America."

Asked the traditional question, "Who is your favorite composer?" Menuhin replied with a smile: "When it comes to composers, I am by nature polygamous. I find as much enjoyment in playing Bartok as Brahms and as great pleasure in Beethoven as in Bach."

Speaking of Bach, Menuhin added, "Next March I am playing the six unaccompanied sonatas of Bach in two concerts in Paris. They tell me those concerts are already sold out. Paris is the greatest Bach audience in the world."

Tonight Menuhin will play the violin concerto by the late Sir Edward Elgar. When he was 15 years old, Menuhin played this music under the composer's direction. He also made the only recording of the concerto, again with Elgar conducting.

Today at 32, Menuhin has been playing in public for 25 years. He is the youngest recipient of the French Legion of Honor award, a distinction usually given only to those over 40. The French government made the award last spring in recognition of Menuhin's outstanding work on behalf of displaced persons, particularly children, throughout Europe.

Tonight the young American-born artist opens the nineteenth season of the National Symphony under the baton of Howard Mitchell, new conductor of the orchestra. It will be the first time the two Americans have collaborated in this manner.

Truman Promised Shot At Bear, Deer, Gobbler

An invitation to President Truman yesterday to visit Alabama was baited with a promise that he could shoot "a bear, a deer and a gobbler all in one day."

The bid for a visit to his 100,000-acre game preserve at McIntosh was extended by Representative Frank W. Boykin. He reported that Mr. Truman seemed most interested in the one million pine trees he planted last year and two million he plans to set out this year.

1500 Montgomery Residents' Chests X-Rayed in Week

A total of 1500 persons in Montgomery County have had their chests X-rayed in the past week in a campaign by the Montgomery County Tuberculosis Association, it was announced yesterday by J. M. McInerney, chairman of the case-finding committee.

A traveling X-ray unit will visit communities in the county through November 4. The schedule for the unit for the rest of the week is:

Today, Clagettsville, 3 to 5 p. m., and Browningsville, 6 to 9 p. m.; Thursday, Woodfield, 3 to 5 p. m., and Cedar Grove, 7 to 9 p. m.; Friday, Damascus, 2 to 9 p. m., and Saturday, Clarksburg, 10 a. m. to 5 p. m.

7 Persons Named By D. C. to Attend Labor Law Parley

The District Commissioners yesterday appointed seven District representatives to the Sixteenth National Conference on Labor Legislation, which will meet in the Interdepartmental Auditorium November 29 to December 1.

Those designated in a letter from Commissioner John Russell Young to Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin were:

Mrs. Albert W. Atwood, chairman of the District Minimum Wage and Industrial Safety Board; Miss Carrie L. Allgood, executive secretary of the District Minimum Wage and Industrial Safety Board; Fred C. Thomas, District Director of Industrial Safety; C. F. Preller, president of the Central Labor Union; Frank O'Connor, American Federation of Labor; J. C. Turner, AFL labor union representative; George Weaver, executive secretary, Washington Industrial Union Council, CIO.

Zone Board Meets Today

The District Board of Zoning Adjustment will meet today at 9:30 a. m. in the District Building board room to hear 19 appeals for permits for special land uses within existing zoning classifications.

In Memoriam

A booklet of 101 "In Memoriam" tributes suitable for publication is now available without charge. Remembrances for all members of the family and for friends are included. The booklet may be obtained at the front counter in the Post building, by telephoning your request, or by writing to the Washington Post Classified Advertising Department, Washington 4, D. C.

New Small Loan Regulation Called Unconstitutional

The Columbia Auto Loan, Inc., sued in District Court yesterday to have a new District small-loan regulation declared unconstitutional.

The suit declares that the District Commissioners have assumed the legislative powers of Congress in enacting the rules which go into effect November 1.

The Columbia corporation which operates the Columbia Credit Co. at 2221 14th st. nw., says that the regulation discriminates in favor of banks and other exempt businesses and subjects it to criminal penalties for noncompliance. The due process clause of the Constitution is violated by the rules, it is charged.

Misunderstanding Causes Rejection Of Used Car Bids

The District Commissioners yesterday rejected both bids made two weeks ago on 22 used cars owned by the District because of an apparent misunderstanding on the part of the high bidder.

Paul Chalupsky, property survey officer, recommended both bids be rejected because the high bidder, Manhattan Auto and Radio Co., 1706 7th st. nw., "must have received the impression" that the vehicles would be delivered right away. Actually, Chalupsky said, it probably will be 90 days before new replacement vehicles are received and the old ones can be released.

September Sales Tax Yield Now $980,000

District sales tax receipts from September sales now total $980,000, Sales Tax Administrator Allan F. Brooke announced yesterday.

Brooke estimated the September figure will reach $1,100,000 when returns are in from about 100 merchants who were granted extensions. Receipts on August sales were about $840,000.

Call for Nurses' Aides

The Fairfax County Chapter, American Red Cross, yesterday issued a call for trained nurses' aides to volunteer their services on monthly county blood donor days. Interested persons are asked to call the chapter, Falls Church 2885.

I. Holober, Jeweler, Dies at 68

Isidore Holober, 68, operator of jewelry and watch repair stores here for 28 years, died of a heart attack early yesterday at Garfield Hospital. He had been stricken at his home, 1216 Shepherd st. nw., a few hours earlier.

A native of Hungary, Mr. Holober came to this country 45 years ago, and lived in Jersey City until he moved his family to Washington in 1921.

Mr. Holober operated two stores in the 1200 block of 7th st. nw., during his lifetime here. He retired in June, three months after his son, Charles, confessed to the murder of his estranged wife near a Fairfax County, Va., nudist camp, and the burial alive of their 8-month-old child. He is now awaiting trial.

In addition to this son, the elder Mr. Holober is survived by his wife, Mrs. Bertha Holober, and a daughter, Mrs. Adele Itkin, both of the Shepherd st. address, and two sons, Irvin, an Army lieutenant now stationed in Japan, and Edward Holober, 821 Ray rd., Takoma Park, Md.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a.m. today from the Goldberg funeral home, 4217 9th st. nw. Burial will be in B'nai Israel Cemetery, Oxon Hill, Md.

$32,399 Given, Cathedral Drive Will Continue

Gifts totaling $32,399 have been received by the Washington Cathedral on its drive for $50,000 for sustaining and building work, it was reported yesterday.

The report on funds was made yesterday at a luncheon for 100 volunteer solicitors at Barker Hall, YWCA, 17th and K sts. nw. The drive will continue through November 10, and is part of a Nation-wide campaign to raise funds to support and continue work on the unfinished Cathedral at Wisconsin and Massachusetts aves. nw.

A. Lloyd Symington, general chairman of the drive in the Greater Washington area, said that although results to date have surpassed last year's gifts at about the same time, only one-tenth of the prospective contributors have been covered by solicitors at this time.

Chicagoan Sues Times-Herald For $5250 in Pay

Ray Helgesen, of Chicago, Ill., filed suit yesterday for $5250 against the executors of the estate of the late Eleanor Patterson, publisher of the Washington Times-Herald.

Helgesen said that his services as sports editor of the newspaper were "summarily terminated" March 19, 1947. He claims he is due under the collective bargaining agreement between The American Newspaper Guild and the newspaper the salary for 16 weeks' vacation pay, eight weeks' severance pay, and two weeks' notice. He said he accepted under duress five weeks' salary only.

The defendants are Frank C. Waldrop, William C. Shelton and Joseph Brooks. Helgesen is represented by Albert W. Fox.

Plan Talk Delayed By Virginia Unit

Newport News, Va., Oct. 25 (AP). The Virginia Commission of Fisheries today decided to postpone discussion of a bi-State crabbing proposal offered by Gov. William Preston Lane, jr., of Maryland, until the full board could act on it.

The proposal would allow crabbers of Maryland and Virginia to operate on either side of the State boundary in Chesapeake Bay, "within limits to be worked out" by the two States.

First presented at the September meeting, the plan was given to commission members for further study. It may be brought up again for discussion at the November meeting.

Funeral Rites Set Today for W. H. Close

Funeral services for Wilbur H. Close, 80, retired Veterans Administration official who died early yesterday, will be held at 1 p. m. today at the Hines Funeral Home, 2901 14th st. nw. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mr. Close worked in the Veterans Administration from 1917 until his retirement in 1940. He practiced law in St. Louis for 30 years before joining the Government here.

A native of Cincinnati, Mr. Close took his law training at the University of Tennessee Law School. He was a member of the Kenwood Country Club.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Mattie Close, and a daughter, Mrs. Norman S. Olson, wife of the president of the Virgin Islands Co.

World Bank Examines Philippine Reports

The International Bank for Reconstruction and Development announced yesterday that it had received from the Philippine Government technical and economic reports relating to the hydroelectric projects on the island of Luzon and a report bearing upon the economic and financial position of the Republic. The Bank's technical staff is now proceeding to examine these reports.

The Bank has so far made no loans to the Philippine Republic. In its fourth annual report, issued last September, it stated that further discussions concerning the hydroelectric projects awaited the submission of the technical project reports and receipt of satisfactory evidence that remedial measures of an economic and financial nature were being taken.

7 New Polio Cases Listed In D. C. Area

They include a 6-year-old boy, 100 block of Anacostia rd., se., who was admitted to Children's Hospital October 20; a 6-year-old girl, 600 block of C st., se., who was admitted to Children's Hospital October 19; and a 4-year-old girl, 2200 block of 40th st., nw., who was admitted to Children's Hospital October 24.

This brought the number of cases reported in the District this year to 97 as against 116 on the same date last year.

Four new cases in Arlington upped the county total to 23 this year.

They were: a 4-year-old boy from the 5900 block of N. 9th st., Arlington, admitted to Children's October 21; a 16-month-old girl from the 1100 block of S. Mrs. Vogel Fetes 2 Young Artists

By Marie McNair

MRS. MARTIN VOGEL, who believes in encouraging young musicians, entertained at a supper party last night for Mrs. Grayson Headley and Miss Nan Garcia, the one a composer, the other a singer of modern songs.

Mrs. Headley's concerto, "Rhapsody of Youth," was played publicly at Lisner Auditorium for the first time last night by the Air Force Band with Col. George Howard conducting.

Mr. and Mrs. Headley, quite naturally, were in the audience, as were Mrs. Vogel and Nan and lots of friends of both gifted young artists.

Later about 100 guests—mostly young people, came back to Mrs. Vogel's house for supper, at this first in a series of parties the hostess has planned for the winter. There was more music after supper with Nan Garcia's soprano voice enchanting everyone.

NEWS NOTES:

Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Jones, back from several months in Europe, had more than the usual bird's-eye view. They took their car over with long trips through the Swiss and Italian Alps. They also spent some time in London and Paris, Brussels and The Hague.

"They say" that Herman Baruch, former United States Ambassador to The Netherlands may bring his Dutch bride to Washington the first of the year. There's a chance that he will be named Assistant Secretary of State.

DATE-BOOK DATA:

The Great October Socialist Revolution will be celebrated as usual this year with a reception at the Soviet Embassy on Monday afternoon, November 7. The Ambassador and Madame Panyushkin will be hosts.

Mrs. John Allan Dougherty will entertain at tea on Saturday at her home, 1868 Columbia rd.

MRS. THEODORE O. WEDEL, chairman, and Mrs. Harold H. Burton (right), vice chairman of the residential unit of the Community Chest Campaign, discuss plans for the women's club and residential luncheon at the Mayflower Hotel November 1. Luncheon speakers will be Miss Helen Hokinson, cartoonist for the New Yorker, and Mrs. Agnes E. Meyer, writer and analyst on social welfare problems. Mrs. Fred M. Vinson, wife of the Chief Justice, will present awards to the outstanding individual worker, team and division in the Community Chest drive

Parties Given For Jacksons, Wincklers

MR. AND MRS. JEAN-CLAUDE WINCKLER, who are leaving the end of the month for Venice, Italy, were honor guests yesterday at a cocktail party given by the First Secretary of the Italian Embassy and Signora Bounous. In the gathering were the Italian Counselor, Mario Luciolli, and Signora Luciolli; Italian Attache, Gabriele Paresce, and Signora Paresce; the British Second Secretary, Earl Jellicoe, and Countess Jellicoe; John Walker, and the French Counselor, Jean Daridan.

Mr. Winckler has served at the French Embassy and has recently been appointed Consul General at Venice. During their stay in Washington, Mr. and Mrs. Winckler have been among the most popular diplomatic couples.

THE Commercial Secretary of the Canadian Embassy, D. W. Jackson, and Mrs. Jackson were honored at a farewell cocktail party given yesterday by the Canadian Commercial Counselor and Mrs. John H. English. Among those who attended were State Department officials and members of the Canadian and South African embassies and their wives. Mr. and Mrs. Jackson are leaving next week for Rio de Janeiro, where Mr. Jackson will serve as commercial secretary.

Cathedral Holds 2 Lecture Series

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lee Peru entertained at a small dinner last evening before attending one of a series of lectures on "Christianity and Modern Man" at Washington Cathedral Library. U. S. Friendship Fires Democracy in Turkey, Washington Club Told

By Genevieve Reynolds and Nicha Soure

IN TURKEY, all doors are open to Americans, according to Nuzhet Baba, press attache at the Turkish Embassy.

This is true not merely because of American financial aid, but because America gave help in the war and postwar periods when Turkey really needed it, Mr. Baba said in his informal address before members of the Washington Club yesterday.

The average woman in Turkey, however, holds some erroneous impressions of her American sisters, the speaker continued. They think we are fabulously rich, attend daily fashion shows and have an easy life. Moreover, many in Turkey believe they should have the same glamorous Hollywood version.

But as a whole the envoy sees Turkish women taking life very seriously now. They can be found in all the professions and taking an active interest in government and world affairs.

"American friendship is the most important factor in transforming ideas of democracy in Turkey," explains Mr. Baba. Schools are being adapted to American systems, including self government, free debate and discussions. "Our educational program is to educate as many people as possible without regimentation," the attache went on. "So far, since the war, we have opened some 20 institutions in the villages to train boys and girls."

However, he pointed out that many welfare and educational projects could not be inaugurated now because 40 percent of the nation's budget must go into a military defense program.

The Turkish people can't change the situation until world conditions are altered. With all her neighbors except Russia, Turkey has had sincere cordial relations. Russia and her satellites—Bulgaria and Rumania—keep up a constant barrage of propaganda telling the Turkish people that they are mismanaged and misruled, said Baba.

Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, who presided and introduced the speaker, confided that she always had a close feeling for Turkey. "My husband was born there," she smiled.

UDC, WCTU Convene Today

TWO local groups will hold their annual meetings today. The District of Columbia Division of the United Daughters of the Confederacy will convene at Confederate Memorial Hall and the Women's Christian Temperance Union fall rally will be held at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church.

The Daughters' convention will begin at 9:15 with a business session. Following a recess for lunch the afternoon session will start at 1:15 p. m. Lawrence B. Slater, assistant director of the Sesquicentennial Commission will be the guest speaker.

The fall rally of the WCTU will begin with an officers' meeting at 9:30 a. m. Dr. Edna F. Patterson, chairman of the Department of Health and Medical Temperance; D. A. Delafeld and the Rev. John Rustin will be among guest speakers. Mrs. Guy F. Glossbrenner will preside.

Talk on Arboretum

IF ANY members of the Woman's National Farm and Garden Association should be rather vague about the National Arboretum, the Thursday meeting of the Capital Division will remedy it.

B. Y. Morrison, acting director of the arboretum, will be the guest speaker when the club gathers at the Shoreham Hotel for a business session to be followed by luncheon in the Palladian Room.

Mr. Morrison will tell the story of the development of the arboretum, which began in 1926 under the direction of the Department of Agriculture. It was planned to bring together for permanent display all species and varieties of woody plants which live out of doors in this climate.

The locatior of the arboretum, east of the Anacostia River Parkway on the Baltimore blvd., is an advantageous one, since it is at the borderline where many southern species reach their northern limit and northern species do vice versa.

Be a Curl Pinup Girl if He Growls at That Short Cut

By Peggy Preston

HERE'S A WAY to please the fashion dictator, and the man in your life as well.

The next time the latter growls about your new short haircut, tell him to wait a minute. Then pin on a few curls (more about them in the next paragraph), and dazzle him with your feminine coiffure.

It's easy as putting up a pin curl. A little more expensive, maybe, since you have to buy your curls as well as the tiny, French clasps that are guaranteed to hold them firmly in place. But it's worth it, to keep the peace, ain't it?

In fact, it is quite possible that your best beau will never guess that you've cut your hair, if you wear a cleverly designed hairpiece. You can lunch with the girls and be in the height of fashion with your new, old-fashioned "boyish" bob. At a dinner or dance the same evening you can appear with a sophisticated hairdo, complete with braid, chignon, or shoulder-length curls. With a flip of a pin you can transform your head profile into one that will do justice to the most formal ballgown.

There is a real magic in these hairpieces. The other afternoon we saw a model change her hairstyle—and her personality—three times, simply by adding extra pieces of hair to her close-cropped head.

Mr. Jack, of the beauty salons in the Washington and Willard Hotels, worked the magic, using hairpieces made by Joseph Fleischer & Co., of New York. Selecting pieces that matched the model's natural hair in color and texture, he first attached a smooth braid; removing it, he added a sleek chignon; again, it was replaced by a high cluster of curls placed to cover the "shingled" hair on the back of the neck and head.

Paul Fleischer, representative of the New York firm, was on hand to explain the handiwork of his company, one of the oldest of its kind in this country. He gave us some revealing data on the history and use of "borrowed" hair.

It was first used by no less a siren than Cleopatra. Glamorous women down through the ages have continued to make clever use of it.

Women with "problem" hair have always found hairpieces useful. Hair that is too fine, too thin, straight or brittle can be transformed by adding a matched piece of strong, healthy hair.

Today's recommended casual coiffures are proving to be yet another reason for the popularity of this form of beauty accessory.

"Because while women like short hair, men do not," explained Mr. Fleischer. "With a hairpiece, the girls can have their cake and eat it too."

Tobé Says... Bright Colors Steep Lingerie

HAVE you noticed any washlines lately? They look like a shot in technicolor!

For colored lingerie has become a really popular fashion—not just pinks and blues, but the new costume colors as well.

The smartest thing to do is to carry your costume color right through your lingerie—even to your brassiere and girdle—as a navy costume with navy slip or petticoat, navy bras, navy girdle, navy panties. But if that's too extreme for you, at least wear a slip or petticoat in some pretty new color that will make a striking contrast.

Mary Haworth's Mail

On Learning That His Best Friend Had Been Sneak-Dating His Best Girl, Man Cut Both; Now They Sue Forgiveness, Should He Unbend?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a young man of 22, a Navy veteran and at present a college junior. Until recently I dated a girl, also a student, whom I have known for over five years.

We had countless mutual interests and in time I came to respect and admire her to a degree little short of worship. We dated as often as her studies and mine would permit, but despite her desire to "go steady" I refused to monopolize her time between our dates, on the theory that our schooling was a check to serious courtship. I said that the time to go steady would be after my graduation.

Several months ago I took this girl on a double-date with my best friend, a young man who had served in the Navy with me and prior to that had worked with me, and had gone to the same camp and belonged to the same club with me in boyhood. Our friendship covered a period of eight years. The double date was most enjoyable and others followed, Dick dating various girls while I dated only Jeanne.

Friend Repents, Avoids the Girl

THEN ONE DAY I woke up to find that Dick had been dating Jeanne on the sly. When I openly questioned them, both flatly denied what later proved to be all true. They had been dating for some time. I could have forgiven anything but the manner in which both chose to betray me. Since I first learned of the situation I have completely avoided them.

My friend, regretting his action, refuses to date Jeanne again and has sent an apology. As a result Jeanne now wants very much to see me. I myself, having lost faith in the fellow I most trusted and the girl I most cherished, am frankly confused and disheartened. I miss the relationship of both parties strongly.

Should I excuse either or both of them and try to restore our old relations? Or is there such a thing as righteous anger, however painful, which justifies forgetting both of them, rather than risk a repetition of what has happened, at a later and more serious time? Your advice is sorely needed and will be gratefully appreciated.

P. J.

Plaintiff Cuts His Own Throat

DEAR P. J.: You say you woke up to find your trust betrayed by your best friend and the girl you cherished. Phooey. The harm that's been done stems from your shabby actions.

To see straight is to recognize that the injured member of the trio is Jeanne, in relation to whom you have been and still are a heel—selfish, possessive and unstable—although you think of yourself as a noble fellow who's been fouled.

Here is the story. You've known Jeanne for five years, as her beau, I take it; and you've come to admire and respect her greatly,—but that's not the "love" you're still waiting to experience. Thus while taking Jeanne completely for granted as yours (if you should decide to claim her), and sponging off her emotionally with childish dependency, you've flatly refused to commit yourself to "going steady" or to accept a monopoly on her time between dates with you, and you've also informed her that you aren't a candidate for serious courtship in undergraduate years.

No Foundation for His Gripe

OBVIOUSLY this was a policy of keeping in the clear, of putting Jeanne on notice that it was strictly her risk if she chose to keep on loving you, being faithful to you and dedicating all her time to you. But when it develops that she is quietly dating someone else, a newcomer to her acquaintance who happens to be your old pal, you carry on like a scalded cat, yowling about betrayal of trust, etc. So, brother, your devious dishonesty is really astonishing,—and it is consistent, all the way through.

According to the dating code, the deal you put over on Jeanne left her free to go out with anybody, without consulting or notifying you; so there is no foundation for your horror-struck air of injury. Understandably she was in conflict about dating your pal whom she'd met through you; but ethically it wasn't wrong in view of your policy; and the sneaky procedure and first denials were involuntary accommodation to your difficult temperament, which is well known, probably.

For advice, clean up your dirty tactics, whereby you've been assuring Jeanne that she has no strings on you, while on the other hand trying to keep your brand on her, for that's what your recent vindictive pouting amounts to. Either get engaged or break off cleanly, or take competition in stride as your due if you can't settle your mind decisively. Since your selfishness started the trouble, don't be stuffy about "forgiving."

Eradication of Fear Allays Symptoms of Menopause

By Glen R. Shepherd, M.D.

DOCTORS have found that most women do not need female sex hormone "shots" to cushion the discomforts during the change of life or menopause.

If that is true, and it is, what causes the unpleasant, terrifying and bewildering symptoms in some women during their forties? The answer is not simple but can be summed up in one word: fear.

You probably have read several articles relating the pain of childbirth to deeply-ingrained fears. These articles were written after certain doctors learned how to educate their pregnant patients about the naturalness of the process and the lack of cause for any fear. Women trained to lose their fear experience little or no pain during delivery.

Spring From Fear

Similarly, the symptoms during the change of life spring in large measure from fears.

One of these is the fear, almost a terror, at the back of a woman's mind that she will be less attractive and useful when her child-bearing years are past. Many women still think of having children as their chief function and feel themselves to be outcasts, as non-productive members of society, when they no longer can produce children. Such a time seems to mark the crest of the hill with life, from then on being less meaningful and descending into the valley of the shadow. This is a general feeling, a general fear present in many women though perhaps not recognized in just these terms.

There is another fear, that of the change of life itself. Most women have heard whispered stories of the terrors of this period—wild tales about insanity or disabling symptoms. Such legends give rise to fears of the dismal forties decade just as much as other not so different tales cause fear of childbirth.

Explain Symptoms Away

It is perfectly natural, with these two strong chronic fears present, to have symptoms in varying degrees during the change of life. When doctors explain to their patients the origin of their symptoms and their fears and how the fears arose, many of the symptoms either disappear or become less severe. The clincher in this theory that fear rather than lack of sex hormone causes the symptoms is that explanation plus a mild sedative relieves the symptoms as fully as do the "shots" in many women.

Actually, by the time they reach their forties and fifties, many women have learned to be charming. Their interesting mature personalities more than make up for any alterations in physical appearance. There is just as much pleasure to be found without the risks. The secret of weathering the forties serenely is to avoid borrowing trouble and to maintain many active outside interests.

How to Clean Lamp Shade

I have a silk, or perhaps rayon, lamp shade that has become very streaked and splotched with dust. Is there any way I could remove the dust from this shade other than vacuuming it? J. H. M.

If the covering is sewed on the frame—not glued—you can improve the appearance by washing it.

To do this, fill the bath or laundry tub with warm water, add enough mild soap flakes to make a suds. Remove all outside trimmings and immerse the shade. Go over the spotted areas with a soft brush to get out all of the dirt. When clean, remove soapy water from the tub and refill with clear water and rinse thoroughly.

When rinsed, place in breeze and sun to dry quickly. If it isn't possible to put it outdoors to dry, turn an electric fan on it to hasten the drying. If it dries slowly, the wire frame might rust on the fabric.

When the shade is dry you may wish to put on new trimmings to give it a new appearance.

If the cover is glued on the shade, do not attempt to wash it. You may be able to remove some of the dust by rubbing cornmeal moistened with carbon tetrachloride into the fabric, letting it dry and brushing it out. Repeat, if necessary.

I have a good quantity of bright red and wine corduroy which is very sun-streaked. What could I do to dye it so it can be used? Is bleaching necessary first, and what would be the best dye? R. L.

For an absolutely even dye job, it is best to first remove all of the present color from the corduroy. This can be done by using household bleach or one of the dye color removers sold where dyes are sold. This job can be done easily in an automatic washer. If you don't have one of your own, some of the public automatic laundries will let you do this type of work in their machines. Some of them have extra large equipment especially for handling large pieces, even rugs.

To get a color-fast dye job, the dye must be boiled into the fabric. If you do not have a tub large enough to boil the material with plenty of room for stirring, I suggest you turn the job over to a professional dyer.

You could tint-dye it in an automatic washer, but done this way the dye is not entirely fast and would have to be renewed occasionally. For dye, if you will use any one of the well-known makes you should have good results. Be sure to use enough dye and follow the manufacturer's directions.

PETUNIA!

In solitary splendor
Or accompanied by cake,
An Orange Blossom Sundae
Is the simplest kind to make!

And it's delicious, Petunia! Just pour Orange Blossom Honey over vanilla ice cream. It turns the delicious, chewy consistency of butterscotch sauce!

Bishop-Bracken

For a BANG-UP Party

No party's complete without the salted peanuts all America loves. They're the mark of good taste in hospitality.

PLANTERS is the word for PEANUTS

They're two of the biggest men in town!

And one of them is you. The other one is a man who is giving a lot of his own time to help his neighbors. He's giving his energy, too — out calling on people at their homes and offices, telling people about the Red Feather services of our Community Chest.

It really isn't his job alone. It's everybody's job. But he is a Red Feather volunteer, asking for money for a cause that shouldn't require any begging or groveling.

Where do you come in? Why, you are the man who doesn't flinch or duck or hide behind a lame excuse when the first chap says "Red Feather." Instead, you smile and make him feel welcome. Then you dig down deep for all you can afford to give.

Everybody benefits . . . Everybody gives

Embassy Chef Is a Genius

That's the way the cooking arrangements in most Washington embassies can be characterized, say Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer, Washington Post columnist, and Elsie Morrow in the current Saturday Evening Post.

Their article, "We Toured the Embassy Kitchens," points out that cooks are chosen almost as carefully as ambassadors for these establishments where a burned roast can be an international incident. Yet the chefs have comparatively little kitchen help and virtually no mechanical aids.

A check of six embassy kitchens showed that only one—the Swedish—had an electric mixer. The French Embassy had no temperature control on the ovens, and most kitchens favored the mortar and pestle over the rotary grinder.

Mrs. Thayer and Mrs. Morrow tell how Henri Ducluzeau prepares potage an veloute de homard, a creamy lobster soup, at the French Embassy. They also describe U Khin's curry at the Burmese Embassy and gnocchi a la Romana at Italian Embassy.

Just a Social Afternoon . . .

Subbing for Ill Columnist, Ex-Envoy Takes Dim View Of Capital Haute Monde

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

WITHIN the past two days this department's anatomy has been punctured in various crucial spots with injections of penicillin, our stomach outraged with a variety of sulpha drugs, pain-killers, sodium-bicarbonate, all polished off with sleeping pills.

Naturally, this little routine has somewhat hobbled our natural activity. So, in order to keep abreast of the times and learn what has been cooking in Washington we persuaded a former Ambassador, now temporarily employed in another trade, to stooge for us. He was pretty earnest about it all, keeping a small pad and sharp pencil handy in breast pocket, for jotting impressions.

Without too much trouble he took in two largish cocktail parties and made some interesting notes which were duly communicated over the telephone. We cannot write down the precise words because, from time to time, in an effort to cheer us, he remembered a humorous story which took time to tell and even more time for laughing.

Then, since our throat was the ailing member, more time had to be taken to swallow some sulpha and generally build up resistance for what was coming next.

HERE, IN SUM, is a former Ambassador's bird's-eye view of a couple of stylish functions.

First, he described in detail a Senator and his wife, giving their names with a flourish. It sounded odd and after puzzling a bit we recalled the Senator mentioned died a few weeks ago.

After the correct Senator had been identified, the Ambassador proceeded to safer ground—describing ladies' outfits. Since we do not want to mix The Post in any libel suits names will be omitted or falsified. "Mrs. Blank, well you know what she looks like anyway, had on a brown dress and was sprouting a great many aigrettes.

Emmy had on a black dress and seemed to have about four Birds of Paradise fluttering about—Frances, had on black, too—and I never really realized what an Amazon she is—Alice clutched a mess of furs with rows and rows of horrid little tails.

WHAT DID we eat? Well lots of those messy little things. It wasn't good, it wasn't bad. Yes, I tried to find something amusing for you but I didn't hear a thing that was funny, not even a word—but say, did you know that the Irish insist Adam and Eve were Irish? Well—this is how they explain it—. Oh yes, to get back, Betty had on a brown dress, too, but I couldn't begin to describe her hat. There was some lady musician who looked very impressive and someone who was a Justice of the Supreme Court. "Didn't ANYTHING happen?" we insisted. "Not a thing, it was just the usual thing you get around here, you've been to a million. I think I was pretty good about the clothes, don't you? Did you hear about the foreigner who went to a hotel? Well,—How about sending me out to a few luncheons?"

So, there, in a nutshell, is how the usual afternoon divertissement appears to the male.

Film Pioneer Pleads for Job In Hollywood

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
B. P. SCHULBERG

Hollywood, Oct. 25 (U.P.).—Movie pioneer B. P. Schulberg, once head of Paramount Studio, today pleaded with Hollywood to give him a job.

He advertised in the movie trade papers for work from the men who used to work for him.

The 57-year-old producer, whose name stands for some of the greatest of early talkies, said he placed the ads to "force some guys to open doors to me that have been closed."

The ad read: "As most of you know, I have devoted a third of a century to our industry . . . Yet it seems I can't get a job. My friends tell me doors are closed because I have in my time talked back to some of the big boys.

"This is the only business I know. I am able to work as hard as anyone in it.

"Must we always wait until a productive pioneer is found dead in 'some obscure Hollywood hotel room' (referring to Director D. W. Griffith before you reflect upon an 'indifferent and forgetful' industry?"

By midafternoon, no takers had called.

"I'm not quite broke," said Schulberg. 'The wolf's at the door but he doesn't have his clutches on it yet. It's just that I want to get back to work, so I put in the ad."

Schulberg was head of Paramount from 1925 to 1932 and produced such films as "Wings," "The Way of All Flesh" and "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." He discovered Shirley Temple in "Little Miss Marker" and Sylvia Sidney, Gary Cooper, Claudette Colbert, George Raft and Fredric March.

Yule Tree Stamps By Postoffice In Florida Banned

The Postoffice Department says it's sorry but the postmaster at Christmas, Fla., has to quit stamping tiny green Christmas trees on letters mailed from there.

It's all right for the Chamber of Commerce or a local organization to set up a booth for that purpose, they said, but the regulations forbid postmasters to take time to dress up envelopes.

Mrs. Wanneta S. Tucker has been adding the tiny trees each holiday season for 15 years, ever since she became postmaster. But her idea was too well liked. Snowed under by 150,000 pieces of mail last Christmas, she called for more help with the rubber stamp.

Officials said the ban on special markings extends also to the postoffice at Bethlehem, Conn., where Postmaster Earl S. Johnson has been using a specially designed Christmas tree stamp during the holiday season.

Group Organized To Fight Transit Radios, Fare Hikes

About 45 local citizens who are opposed to having radios in Capital Transit streetcars and buses last night organized a Transit Riders Association and elected two spokesmen who will present their views at the Thursday public hearing on the issue.

William V. Mahoney, real estate man of 607 Albemarle ave., Takoma Park, Md., who called the meeting, and R. A. Seelig, trade association director of information of 3200 16th st. nw., were named spokesmen at the hearing to be held by the District Public Utilities Commission.

Claude N. Palmer of 8010 Eastern dr., Silver Spring, was elected temporary president of the group, while Mahoney was named temporary secretary. A motion to incorporate was carried. Objectives of the group include better transportation service and resistance to higher fares.

Last night's meeting was held at Thomson School, 12th and L sts. nw.

Bad Conscience Costs Man 90 Days in Jail

The Biblical Ananias might have lied, but Aninias Hill told the truth and a lot of good it did him.

Hill, who is 26 and has no fixed address, came into the Second Precinct station house early yesterday to announce that he broke a store window during the night and was glad to get it off his "conscience."

Judge Thomas D. Quinn seemed sympathetic but he then observed that Hill at the moment was on probation from an attempted house-breaking charge. He then proceeded to sentence Hill to serve 90 days in jail for the window-breaking.

By Georganne Williamson

AMEEN DAVID, proprietor of the Blue Mirror, says he got his money's worth in his present entertainers, the Red Caps. He booked them as a quintet, and they have six men on the stand every night.

But his money's worth goes farther than that, and so does the customer's. The Red Caps make hoop-la out of their night's work. The six men roam about their elevated stage in a disorganized manner, dancing, pantomiming, crooning, taking sides and outplaying each other, or just being clever with an original dialogue number.

Then Dee Lloyd McKay comes on. Ensconced on a revolving circular stage, she sings, whistles and stomps. She has several different voices, as many moods. She knocks herself out to entertain, chortling gleefully all the while.

The Blue Mirror is a strongly lighted, spotlessly clean place at 824 14th st. nw. Its motif, inevitably, is blue mirror—in plate glass, with etched figures, or cut-out designs—but inescapable. Red and gold trimmings, with a huge mirrored bar at one end, complete the decor.

SARAH VAUGHN is an appropriate sequel to Billie Holiday at the Club Bali—but she'll be there this week only.

The Merryland Club is bidding for the big time with this lineup of performers: last week it was Art Tatum; this week, Savannah Churchill. In November, it will be Rose Murphy and Pearl Bailey. Willis Conover is emceeing a 15-minute weekly radio show from the Merryland. At 10 tonight, Savannah Churchill goes on the air.

The Old New Orleans staff surprised Nick Gaston, owner, with a birthday party last night—the entire staff gathered around a birthday cake shortly before midnight. Johnny Bradford and Tony Romano are still at the New Orleans; they persuaded their next engagement, in Chicago, to postpone their opening night a week.

Betty and Dubby Lino (the "Latin Linos") are now in the Anchor Room at the Hotel Annapolis. They use the Hammond organ, electric guitar, accordion, bass fiddle, conga drums, and moraccas—enough to keep them busy, anyway. And oh, yes, they sing.

At the Lotus now: The Martins, a dance team; Phyliss Louis, young tap dancer with sparkle, and an adagio act on roller skates, Chambers and Blaire.

The Lyon's Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—Leonard Bernstein, the composer-conductor, visited Arturo Toscanini, and they discussed Berlioz's "Romeo and Juliet," which Toscanini had recorded. Bernstein soon will conduct this piece with the Philharmonic. He suggested that in the recording Toscanini had played one passage twice as fast as it should have been done, according to the score. "Really?" said Toscanini. "Perhaps you are right" . . . The next day Bernstein studied the score again, and discovered his error—that Toscanini had played the passage exactly as written. He immediately wrote and went out to mail a letter of apology to the maestro. And when he returned to his apartment he found a letter from Toscanini, saying: "You were right."

Governor Dewey's last meeting with General Eisenhower may result in his advocacy of Eisenhower for the governorship of New York in 1950 . . . Vishinsky will ask the U. N. for time to make reply, on the floor, to the remarks by President Truman at the U. N. cornerstone ceremonies on Monday . . . Elliott Roosevelt is studying Russian at the Asia Institute—perhaps in preparation for another personal interview with Stalin . . . David O. Selznick entered a bid for the television rights to all of G. B. Shaw's plays. He's also bidding for Shaw's "Candida," to tour it for a year with Jennifer Jones, and then film it.

Daniel Arnstein, who established a scholarship fund for the children of the cabdrivers who work for his transit company, sat with some friends in Toots Shor's and referred to the days when he himself was a cabdriver and sought an education. When Arnstein was sent to the Orient by President Roosevelt as United States commissioner to reopen the Burma rd., he was given a reception by Chiang Kai-shek. And in honor of the distinguished American visitor, several members of the Chinese government wore large buttons "Harvard, '24." "Yale, '31." "Cornell, '29." Mr. Arnstein then prepared his own button: "International Correspondence School, '25."

A customer at the Stork Club lost an address book one day, and a waiter brought it to Sherman Billingsley. The proprietor glanced at it briefly, and said: "The loser can't be so important; my name isn't in this book."

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Junior Experts

Mrs. Knowles was talking with some of her friends about the way social studies was being taught in the high school. At one point, she said, "Let's ask Mary Ann (her fifteen-year-old daughter). She ought to be an expert on that." And so for 20 minutes, Mary Ann gave her ideas about what was being done.

Too seldom do we stop to think that our children may be the experts on a good many things. Yet we all know that many a boy knows far more about radio than does his dad. And it's not at all unlikely that girls who have had good courses in clothing at school may have better ideas about style and color combinations than does mother. In all sorts of areas the youngsters are the experts as far as the family is concerned.

The lift they get when they are called on to play the expert's role is a very important part in the growth of self-confidence. It also makes them appreciate their parents or other members of the family who look to them for help and advice.

Parents don't need to feel that because they are older and more experienced in many ways, their youngsters should always be seen and not heard. We'll learn a good many things and grow to appreciate our children if we give them the chance to be experts when the situation warrants it.

What's the Verdict?

COURT COSTS

Q. Jones sued Smith for payment of a long-overdue bill for groceries. Jones won a judgment for the amount, and the court additionally awarded him $10 for repayment of the cost of filing the suit and serving the papers. Smith refuses to pay the $10, contending that the court has no authority to award costs in the absence of a statute. Is he correct?

A. Originally in the English courts (from which most of our law is drawn) there was no award of costs. Then by statute the courts were given the right to award costs to successful plaintiffs. Later this was extended to successful defendants. While a few American courts have assumed (because the right to award costs existed by statute at the time of the revolution) they could grant costs, the general rule is that no costs may be awarded unless there is a statute expressly giving the right . . . F.L.D.

Cases discussed illustrate general principles. They should not be construed as legal advice in particular cases. Take your legal problems to your lawyer.

Expense Account

I figure my expenses and . . . Submit them to the boss . . . In order that my own accounts . . . Will not reflect a loss . . . But every time I turn them in . . . The boss begins to shout . . . And every item he reviews . . . He is inclined to doubt . . . He tells me it appears that I . . . Am in a spending mood . . . And that I could not possibly . . . Have eaten so much food . . . He questions my hotel bill and . . . My travel cost and such . . . And has a fit because he thinks . . . I entertain too much . . . Regardless of how carefully . . . I try to live and eat . . . The boss insists that my account . . . Is just a swindle sheet.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Maybe Their Motto Is: 'Die Now and Save'

Jess Manbeck of The Washington Post proofroom was just recovering from a two-week illness when the postman delivered an offer of a 20 percent discount from a local undertaker. Back on the job again, Jess murmurs:

"I hate to pass up such a bargain, but maybe it's for the best."

THE MALE MIND

David Kandel of 1311 H st. nw. says he's thinking of opening a tavern to be called "No-place." This would enable husbands to account for their whereabouts with immunity.

AIN'T WOMEN WONDERFUL?

Henry J. Brill of Presidential Gardens, Alexandria, Va., reports the following conversation between a dog-tired salesclerk and an equally weary Government Girl, back from a hard Saturday of shopping:

G-Girl: Oh, I'm so utterly exhausted.

Clerk: Me too. What have you been doing?

G-Girl: I've been shopping all day. It was awful.

Clerk: What did you buy?

G-Girl: Nothing. I'm broke.

Clerk: Then what did you go shopping for?

G-Girl: Why, I always do. Saturday is the only day I have free for shopping.

MISCELLANY

"Looks like the country's theme song these days is 'Stirs and Strikes Forever,'" comments Henry F. Unger of 4930 South Dakota ave. ne. . . . Edgar Graham of 1717 R st. nw. sent me scurrying off to the library with the challenge that The Washington Post had erroneously credited "Don't give up the ship" to Capt. James Lawrence instead of to Commodore Perry. I thought he was right until I found Captain Lawrence quoted in Bartlett as saying: "Tell the men to fire faster and not to give up the ship; fight her till she sinks." That's close enough to get us off the hook . . . Mrs. Benjamin Burch wants me to remind you that you're all welcome to attend the monthly free movies at the Washington World Affairs Center, 1712 H st. nw. Tonight's program, starting at 8, will include the Nuernberg trial pictures, plus films on Egypt, Hawaii and Germany . . . I have just discovered that CBS doesn't always mean "Columbia Broadcasting System." Margaret Hines refers to the Cage Bird Society as CBS in telling me about the big show to be held this Saturday and Sunday at the Odd Fellows Temple, 419 7th st. nw. It will feature all sorts of birds and tropical fish, and the admission price is 25 cents, with the profits going to the Polio Ward at Children's Hospital . . . The only nice thing about living in an apartment is that you don't have to spend your October Sundays raking leaves and picking up after Dame Nature.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Eight-week-old male Maltese kitten." (Warfield 3046.)

"Black, 2-month-old puppy." (Otis 7409.)

"Part-chinchilla cat wants good home for her four children, Eeny, Meeny, Miney and Mo." (Wisconsin 0496.)

PERSONAL NOTES

Mrs. Mariette B. d'Anjou, 1923 I st. nw.: I got your French poetry translated, but it took a bit of doing because most of our office linguists are a bit rusty. How about some English verses?

S. Voltz, 1717 20th st. nw.: I fooled you. I was careful to put a comma in the proper place, thereby preventing a badly constructed sentence from meaning something entirely different.

PUN FUN

Eleanor W. Poole of 2418 Taylor ave., Alexandria, Va., says that I needn't be self-conscious about my puns; the best of us yield to temptation occasionally.

By way of example, she passes along an item which appeared recently in a food industry trade paper. It reported that a new store drew lots of attention on its opening day by advertising:

"Big Sale on Deep Freezers. Only Vaughan to a Customer."

On my way to the market this morning, I noticed a telephone truck parked in front of Jane Paul's house. I wasn't surprised when Jane called this afternoon to say she'd gotten her telephone.

She said she is on a party line, the same as I am. The telephone installer had explained that about seven out of every ten families with telephones are on party lines. Jane said if it weren't for party-line service, she would have had to wait a lot longer for her telephone.

That reminded me of something I was reading in the newspaper last night about the telephone company's construction and improvement program. The news article said that "in spite of the rapid progress being made on this program, some people are still waiting for telephones." It went on to say that "the company was making the widest possible use of party-line facilities because party lines mean more service for more people, sooner." The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Company.

Collection Weak Income Tax Link

By Drew Pearson

President Truman's warning that there must be a tax increase recalls the fact that Bureau of Internal Revenue experts estimate they could collect close to a billion dollars more annually without increasing taxes if they had better income tax enforcement.

Pearson

Two years ago the Eightieth Congress chopped off a huge army of income tax examiners, a group of hard-working, underpaid public servants who have the unpleasant but necessary job of checking on people's income taxes. While part of this cut personnel has been reinstated, the tax examiners are still woefully understaffed and able to inspect only a fraction of the returns.

On top of this has developed another tax-payment deterrent—namely, delays and wire-pulling in the prosecution of tax frauds.

But when tax frauds are sent to United States district attorneys for criminal prosecution, interminable delays sometimes develop. Some district attorneys just do not want to prosecute. Sometimes local politics are involved, and since United States district attorneys are appointed under a political spoils system on the recommendation of local Senators and Congressmen, they are sometimes more inclined to take orders from Congressmen than from the Justice Department.

Delayed Cases

But whatever the reasons, here are some tax-fraud cases which have been delayed or sidetracked between the Justice Department and the district attorneys in the field. In some cases no politics may be involved, but in any case the effect on the rest of the tax-paying public is bad.

Just outside Washington the T-men found that the sheriff of Prince Georges County, Md., Earl Sheriff, had collected about $49,000 from gamblers during four years though he reported a total of only $8400. But when the Justice Department sent this case to U. S. Attorney Bernard Flynn in Baltimore, he sent it back with advice that it was a difficult case to prosecute.

Again out in Kansas City, Kans., the T-men caught an eminent doctor, Herbert Hessler, failing to report as income 1000 fees received from patients during three years. The Justice Department sent the case to U. S. Attorney Luther in Topeka for criminal prosecution, but Luther wrote back that he did not want to prosecute, because Dr. Hessler was too prominent in the community. The Justice Department instructed him to proceed anyway, however, and he is now doing so.

Latest Example

Latest tax fraud case which has come to the attention of this column is that of W. J. Hardy and F. McKenzie Davison, the Arlington, Va., asphalt kings who were recommended for criminal prosecution by the Justice Department last July. This decision to prosecute came only after one year's delay, and various discussions with attorneys which included one conference with Senator Byrd, plus talks with other Virginia politicians.
